NAVY MOVES TO RE-OPEN YARDS TODAY

Recruits Striking Machinists as Civil Service Workers at West Coast Plants.

UNIONS RECALL PICKETS

Peace In 46-Day-Old Dispute Seen as Company Agrees To Sign Contract.

(By United Press)

SAN FRANCISCO—The navy attempts today to reopen struck San Francisco bay shipyards holding $500,000,000 in defense contracts by recruiting striking machinists as civil service workers.

Union leaders branded the navy move as "strike breaking" and ordered their members to stay away from the civil service registration booths set up outside the Bethlehem and Moore shipyards.

Rear Admiral John Wills Greenslade issued the call to "all machinists, regardless of union affiliation" to apply for the civil service jobs. They will be given required examinations immediately and those who qualify will be put to work as civilian employes of the United States navy at once.

They will be assigned to one of the 11 plants from which AFL and CIO machinists walked seven weeks ago, tieing up production on vital warcraft and merchant vessels. It appeared likely that most of the recruited machinists would be sent into the Bethlehem plant which holds more than half of the total San Francisco bay naval defense construction.

Police Chief Charles W. Dullea ordered picket lines moved back from the plants so that the machinists could reach the civil service booths. The unions countered by withdrawing all pickets.

The navy action came with peace in the 46-day-old dispute just around the corner.

Bethlehem corporation yesterday agreed to sign the Pacific coast master shipbuilding agreement with the bay cities metal trades council and the AFL machinists planned to decide at their regular meeting tomorrow night whether to re-enter the council and accept the agreement. They withdrew from the council shortly after the strike began when other metal workers returned to work past their picket lines.

The United States also ordered all Italian consulates in America closed and Italy replied by taking similar action against American consulates in this country.

NEW FHA PLAN TO AID CITY

Mansfielders To Be Allowed Loans Up To 90 Per Cent on Building Work.

Expected to spur the city's present building boom and relieve its housing shortage, Mansfield today had been placed in a Federal Housing administration classification allowing loans up to 90 per cent of the cost of construction.

The extension of Title No. 6 to Mansfield will allow contractors in the city to construct homes for sale or rental to defense workers under more liberal terms than before.

Mansfield's new classification was approved yesterday by President Roosevelt along with that of several other vital defense districts where housing shortages are found to be threatening defense activities.

Contractors in Mansfield have been unable to actually attain funds up to now to build houses. Persons wishing homes had to make their applications individually and were required to put up from 10 to 20 per cent of the total cost.

Under Title Six, contractors can obtain 90 per cent of the money needed to build homes and rent them on their own terms, possibly

Sun Worshippers In Cleveland May Get Some Privacy

CLEVELAND—(INS)—Sun worshippers today perked up their ears following the announcement by properties director Frank E. Bubna that Cleveland parks soon may have spots where ladies and gentlemen may sun themselves—au naturel, at that.

Upon making a week-end inspection of parks, Bubna discovered a number of young ladies sunning themselves while very much in the state of undress.

This gave Bubna the idea.

"Why not set up private municipal sunning places for men and women?" he asked his wife. "If the Russians can do it, so can we."

An assistant recalled the plan was tried some years ago on the roof of one of the bathhouses, but that people suddenly took a great interest in climbing a steep hill overlooking the solarium.

Bubna and associates now are looking on "sun spots" to be surrounded by canvas, with no overlooking hills.

Tragedy Ends Vacation Trip

Dr. And Mrs. Rehder, Crushed To Death When Car, Truck Meet Head-On, To Be Buried In Nebraska Thursday.

The unexpected deaths yesterday of Dr. and Mrs. Roy C. Rehder, who were killed instantly in a head-on collision with a truck while vacationing in Nebraska, left Mansfielders in all walks of life stunned today.

The Mansfield-Richland county health commissioner and his wife, who lived at 200 West Park boulevard, were crushed to death when a truck struck their automobile shortly before noon on U. S. route 30, near Haven, Neb., about 40 miles east of Grand Island Dr. Rehder's former home.

Merrick County Sheriff D E Crites, who investigated the crash, said the truck, driven by Edward L.Melchen of Norfolk, Neb., apparently swerved into the path of the commissioner's eastbound car, reports from Central City said. The couple's light coach was demolished.

Their bodies will not be brought back to Mansfield, The News-Journal was informed at noon today. Double funeral services will be held Thursday at 2 p. m. at Grand Island and burial will also be made there. Dr. Rehder was 41 and his wife was 33.

The Grand Island Independent reported that Dr. and Mrs. Rehder had left Grand Island shortly before the tragedy and were en route to Mrs Rehder's former home in Council Bluffs, Ia.

The commissioner and his wife had left Mansfield June 14 to take his widowed mother, Mrs. Frieda Rehder, and one of his two sisters, Mrs C R McKee, who had been visiting here, to their home in Grand Island

Dr. Rehder's mother and sister had been here about two weeks, returning with Mrs. Rehder who, with the doctor had been called to Council Bluffs early in May because of serious illness of her father.

Friends here said that Dr. and Mrs. Rehder had planned to stop off in Council Bluffs and to bring Mr. and Mrs Rudolph Seidl, Mrs Rehder's parents, back with them for a visit. They expected to be back in Mansfield Saturday

BREEZE HELPS

Fair Weather To Continue Tonight and Tomorrow.

Mansfielders were grateful for a cooling breeze which swept through the city today and weather forecasts say there will be little change in temperature through tomorrow.

Following a week-end in which the mercury shot well above the 90 mark, the change was welcome. Generally fair weather is predicted for tonight and tomorrow.

Highest mark hit by thermometers yesterday was 88 degrees with a low of 59. Average for the day was 73 5 degrees Although clouds clustered and rain threatened late in the day, no precipitation was recorded.

The mercury jumped upward from 59 early today to 77 degrees around noon, but observers did not expect that yesterday's mark would be equalled.

Capt. Glenn L. Bierly announced today that approximately 60 men had enlisted and would be mustered in with Bierly and his two officers, First Lieut. Hollis Moorhead and Second Lieut. R. B. Schoenman.

HAIRCUTS COST 65 TOMORROW

Shaves Also Advance To 35 Cents as Barbers Agree on New Price Schedule.

Effective tomorrow morning, the price of haircuts and shaves goes up in Mansfield.

Representatives of the Master Barbers association (the shop operators) and the Journeymen Barbers (the barbers) today announced that the new prices would be 65 cents for haircuts and 35 cents for shaves. Previous prices have been 50 cents and 25.

Children's haircuts, however, will remain at 50 cents except on Fridays and Saturdays.

City-wide agreement among members of both groups to the price increase was claimed by representatives of the two groups, who explained that the executive committees of each had been empowered by their respective memberships to work out the new schedule.

Reason given for the increase was a sharp increase in the cost of barber supplies and increased living costs Since barbers receive a percentage of the cost of each haircut and shave, their share under the increased prices will be greater.

The question of increasing haircut and shave prices was first brought up about a month ago, and has been the subject of much discussion since it was first broached.

Berlin Claims Gains, Despite Soviet Defense

Turkish Sources Say Russians Have Started Attacks At Many Points; Berlin Holds Back Details As It Reports New Progress.

BULLETIN

STOCKHOLM—(UP)—Radio Kaunas was reported tonight by well-informed Lithuanian quarters to have broadcast a speech by a German officer stating that German troops were entering the Lithuanian capital.

BULLETIN

VICHY, France—(UP)—Unconfirmed reports circulated in diplomatic circles today that Spain was preparing to send a "token" detachment of troops to fight on the side of Germany against Russia.

(By United Press)

Germany claimed today that Adolf Hitler's blitzkrieg legions are punching through Red defense lines and into Russia but from Ankara came a report that Soviet armies have launched their own blitz-style attack.

The Ankara report—attributed to sources close to the Axis—gave no details but said that the Red army, imitating Nazi tactics, had launched attacks at many points along the 1,800-mile front.

No such operations were mentioned by the Soviet high command which said that Russian lines were holding except at Brest Litovsk and at two points opposite the eastern Prussian frontier.

Berlin continued reticent on specific details of the vast attack and warned correspondents against speculating on the progress of the Nazi advance or the points at which German forces are advancing.

The first is against the Baltic states from East Prussia. The Germans insist that a revolt has broken out in Lithuania which is aiding their cause.

The second is in the central Polish sector with Brest Litovsk the focal point. This drive is expected to branch out into a two pronged affair, one heading northeast toward Minsk and the other prong southeast toward Kiev.

The third sector is that in Rumania where one German force is attempting to move on Kiev from northwest Rumania while another Nazi column, aided by Rumanian troops, is pushing into Bessarabia.

The British and Russians made rapid progress in coordinating their military cooperation. Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the house of commons that agreement has been reached on collaboration between Britain and Russia to fight the war to the finish and that renewed assurances of increased aid by the United States have been received within "the last few hours."

Berlin attempted to belittle the new Royal Air Force offensive which has been launched due to the diversion of Luftwaffe operations to the east.

However, London reported that RAF attacks are proceeding with unequalled force upon German industries, North sea ports and the French invasion ports.

Reports from Stockholm claimed that heavy firing was heard in the southern part of the Gulf of Finland, particularly near the island of Gotland. It was uncertain whether air bombardment or naval operations were in progress.

In Madrid there were demonstrations by Falangists, calling for a Spanish army to fight beside Germany against Russia. Indications were that Spain may make some such move against their old Communist enemies of the Spanish nationalist movement.

The Nazi-controlled press of Paris quickly took up the line that Adolf Hitler's attack on Russia was designed to "save Europe from bolshevism."

A Moscow report said that Russian anti-aircraft guns in the Len-

BLACKOUT: Moscow Tests Air Raid Precaution System

(By United Press)

MOSCOW—A Russian anti-aircraft battery shot down a Nazi bombing plane over the Leningrad military district, it was reported today after Moscow went through a realistic air raid drill.

Izvestia reported that the four members of the bomber's crew were captured The exact location where the plane was shot down was not specified except for the reference to the Leningrad military district.

Moscow's trial air raid came at 3 a. m. when sirens screamed, anti-aircraft guns went into action and citizens, many of them convinced that the Luftwaffe was attacking the capital, hurried into air raid shelters. Others stood watching in the streets.

Perfect discipline was observed until the "all clear" signal was sounded at 4:20 a. m.

(The United Press dispatch, passed by the Russian censorship, indicated that the trial was exceedingly realistic. The dispatch did not say specifically that Russian planes were flying over the city, but said that the trial was held "above" Moscow.)

Moscow observed a strict blackout for the second night. All street lights were kept out and gas-masked policemen directed traffic with the aid of portable colored-glass lods.

ALL OUT: British To Speed Up Campaign To Take Syria

(By United Press)

LONDON—Prime Minister Winston Churchill told the house of commons today that the British high command in Syria had been given authority to launch an "all out" offensive to occupy the country as quickly as possible.

Churchill's statement was in reply to a question asked at a time when British forces were reported advancing in Syria, where it was said Palmyra had been taken.

Churchill was asked if he could give assurance that the high command in the middle east had full authority to take whatever measures appear necessary—however drastic—to occupy Syria at the earliest possible moment and that no restraint on political grounds would be imposed.

"Yes," Churchill replied. "Not only has the high command full authority but I especially enjoined them to be guided by military consideration alone."

Since the start of the Syrian campaign the Allied forces had been impeded by instructions to proceed deliberately, avoiding as

OPM Authorities Ready to Act Unless Food, Clothing, Rent Costs Level Off

They're Climbing Slowly But Surely, Federal Experts Ascertain.

(Editor's Note: The following is the second of a series of articles describing the effect the national defense program may have on the cost of living for the man in the street.)

By JACK VINCENT

(INS Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON — OPM officials today are closely watching the rise in the cost of living, ready to move in with measures to control food, clothing and rent costs if the increases do not level off soon.

Federal price control administrator Leon Henderson already has asked 12 major bakeries not to increase the price of bread. In the food line, coffee may be next.

And, on the clothing front a ceiling has been imposed on hide prices to stabilize shoe prices.

In addition, some food items may become scarce because of lack of both ocean-going and transcontinental shipping facilities.

Chicago and Omaha meat shippers, it is reported, are feeling some tightness in the supply of refrigerator cars for moving fresh meats to the densely populated eastern seaboard states. Grand Rapids, Memphis and High Point, N. C., furniture shippers are reported hard pressed to find enough box cars to move their products.

The same situation is facing coal operators. With the peak defense shipments expected in the fall, transportation for coal ingrad district had shot down a Nazi bomber but did not reveal what was the objective of the German air attack.

Finland continued neutral but broke off relations with Poland. There were indications Finland's neutrality may not long endure.

The Russians admitted the loss of Brest Litovsk, key fortress on the Bug river frontier which controls three important highways through and around the vast Pripet marshes which protect Russia's central frontier. The loss of Kolno and Lonza, two small, militarily unimportant towns just inside Russia from the East Prussian frontier, was also admitted.

German reports said that Red bunker defenses on the central front had been crushed in an attack with flame-throwers, tanks, artillery fire and assault troops moving up under the cover of artificial fog.

The Nazi Luftwaffe was engaged in an attack of record intensity, seeking to blast Russian forts and strong points and knock out behind-the-lines communications in preparation for a rolling advance by mechanized and armored ground troops.

Three well-defined Nazi thrusts emerged from the first 48 hours of fighting. One was a drive into the Baltic states from East Prussia. The second was a head-on attack on the central front in the Brest Litovsk area. The third was an attack across the river Prut into Bessarabia with the rich Ukraine as its objective.

Germany for the first time was under air attack from two fronts although Nazi communiques claimed that the bombing was ineffectual and weak. The Red air fleet was concentrating on the German forward positions in East Prussia from which much of the weight of the Nazi attack has been directed. The British carried out a fierce bombing of Cologne, Duesseldorf and Keil, hitting at the heart of the Nazi war effort for the 13th consecutive night.

The Germans claimed that they had touched off a major revolt in the Baltic states among elements hostile to the Russian forces which occupied the region last summer. There was no confirmation of these reports from the Russian side. It appeared doubtful that any large-scale rebellion was in process due to the extremely heavy military concentrations which the Russians have maintained in the three small Baltic states since last summer

A major Nazi attack on Russian sea strength was reported from Ankara which speculated that the Germans shortly might attempt to launch a Black sea force against the Soviet oil port of Batum.

Th German Luftwaffe was said to have attacked Odessa heavily and to have forced Russian fleet units there to put to sea Another big German attack is known to have been made on the Red submarine base at Seabastopol.

Finland still was professing its neutrality and was said to have given London a pledge to maintain that status if not attacked by Russia. However Stockholm reported growing indications that Finland was swinging strongly to the Nazi side. Turkey was neutral and nervous.

London said that Britain and Russia had agreed on a mutual pledge to fight Germany to the finish. A British economic and military mission will go to Moscow shortly as will the British ambassador, Sir Stafford Cripps A start has been made toward resolving the anamolous position of the Poles who are still technically at war with Russia

Nationalist Spain, according to reports both from Madrid and Vichy, wants to get in a blow at the Russians who gave so much aid to their old enemies, the Spanish Loyalists Spain was said to desire to send at least a token expeditionary force to fight at the side of Germany.

The Royal Air Force, taking advantage of its newly acquired air superiority in western Europe, attacked German industrial sites hard all night and this morning roared back across the English channel, spoiling for a fight with the now inferior Nazi protective air squadrons.

It was estimated in London that the number of first line German planes facing Britain in the west has been cut at least one half due to the opening of operations in the east.

Finland and Poland Break Off Relations.

LONDON—(UP)—Polish official circles reported today that Finland had severed diplomatic relations with Poland on grounds Poland is no longer an independent state.

It was said that Finns transmitted a note to the Polish minister Henry K. Sokolnicki, outlining this view. Despite a Polish protest the Finns persisted in their stand, it was said, and Sokolnicki and his small staff will leave Finland shortly, probably for Stockholm.

This development came as the refugee Polish government took steps toward rapprochement with the Soviet.

Pounds French Coast. New RAF Offensive

LONDON—(U.P.)—Towns along the channel coast trembled today under the concussion of gigantic explosions from the French invasion coast as Royal Air Force planes resumed an offensive against Germany and German-occupied areas which now seemed almost continuous day and night.

The explosions started at dawn, just as a great fleet of long range bombing planes, including new four-motored craft, returned to home bases after having blasted western and northwestern Germany during the night.

Hours later, towns on the southeast coast were still shaking from the bombs exploding on the French side of the channel.

British planes had attacked the invasion coast almost continuously yesterday and last night and, in their great sweeps over northern France, had shot down 20 challenging German planes with the loss of only five of their own number

German planes which once came by the hundreds to strew destruction and death over Britain, were little in evidence.

Hungary Severs Relations With Reds.

BUDAPEST, Hungary—(UP)—Hungary broke diplomatic relations with Russia last night but it was said authoritatively today that the government planned no further diplomatic or military action

It was explained that the severance of relations was decided on as an act of solidarity with the German-Italian axis to which Hungary had adhered.

Eden Welcomes Russia as Ally.

LONDON—(AP)—Foreign secretary Anthony Eden formally welcomed Soviet Russia as an ally "in our common task, the defeat of Germany," in a speech in the house of commons today.

Eden urged the British nation to forego political considerations in facing the situation raised by Germany's drive into Russia.

Communism is not the issue, he said, adding, "we have always hated the creed."

But, he went on, what counts is that the Russians "are fighting the man who seeks to dominate the world."

Report Capture Of Syrian Town.

CAIRO—(U.P.)—British general headquarters reported today that British troops have occupied Qantana, southwest of Damascus, and are pushing toward the Damascus-Beirut highway.

Free French and Indian forces were said to have occupied commanding positions north of Barze and achieved local gains in the Merdjayoun sector.

The capture of Palmyra, important airfield in mid-Syria 135 miles northeast of Damascus, was reported in unofficial dispatches from the front.

Brems was called upon to act as a trans-Atlantic "cupid" by five British Royal Artillery gunners stationed at Boston, England, who sought letters from Boston, Mass., girls to relieve their loneliness.

Rushing into the affair to save Brems from embarrassment five B. U. co-eds took time during the lunch hours to write to the gunners.

'CONCHIES' GIVE AID TO BRITAIN

Offer Selves as 'Guinea Pigs' In Effort To Find Cures For Illnesses.

LONDON—(U.P.)—Conscientious objectors who refuse to fight are offering themselves as "guinea pigs" in an effort to find cures for illnesses that are afflicting British soldiers.

They are being infected with a skin disease at a secret laboratory directed by the Sheffield university research department. They also are being used for experiments to determine the amount of calcium required in bread.

Twenty men have offered themselves for experiments. Some are students, and they live in a secret headquarters in an isolated country house near Sheffield. This was revealed at the Yorkshire Conscientious Objectors' Tribunal when Peter Desmond Saunders, 20, of Oakholme-road, Broomhill, Sheffield, was registered on condition that he carry on with his work.

He told how the head of the research institute had got in touch with conscientious objectors who were willing to undergo the experiment. The volunteers had worn army underclothing and had used army blankets to find out how the infection occurred.

The investigation has enabled medical science to go a step further in treating the disease, although no method of prevention has yet been discovered.

K. Mellanby, head of the research department, said that the work was being carried out on the direction of the ministry of health, with the help of some of the university staff "We cannot disclose many details," he added, "but those who have volunteered have been infected and we now are awaiting developments. The volunteers had to be entirely isolated. They are somewhere in the country, and in between research they are working on food production plots.

"All the men are volunteers who believe that in this way they can be of good service to the nation. They will be.

"The work is in its initial stages, and we cannot say at present what the results are likely to be, but we hope that they will be very beneficial."

to indicate whether the truck driver was injured. They did not say either, whether he was being held.

Surviving Dr. Rehder besides his mother and sister, is another sister, Mrs. Richard Linderkamp and a brother, Walter, both of Grand Island. Mrs. Rehder is survived by a brother and sister in Council Bluffs besides her parents.

Dr. Rehder was a member of one of Grand Island's oldest families. His father died years ago.

He graduated from Grand Island high school and Grand Island college where he gained state prominence in football and basketball.

City officials and men who had been associated with Dr. Rehder paid tribute to the commissioner and his work today.

"Dr. Rehder was one of the city's most conscientious workers," said Mayor William J. Locke, when informed of the tragedy. "Such news is a deep shock to everyone working with him. He was especially prominent in preventative work, thereby cutting sharply the city's number of epidemics."

The mayor said that Dr. Rehder had informally asked the board of health to grant him a year's absence starting in September so that he could take up special public studies in Michigan.

"We have lost an outstanding citizen and civic worker," said John G. Routzon, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, "In my many contacts with him, I always found him cooperative and highly efficient. Dr. Rehder served for several years as chairman of the chamber's health committee. His death is a heavy personal and civic loss."

The thoughts of all workers in the health department were summed up in a statement by Dr. W. B. Wild, assistant city-county health commissioner.

"We never had a better man to work with," said Wild. "He operated the department with an efficient yet friendly manner. No one could have worked with him without admiring him greatly. The department will have a difficult time without his guidance. Both as a personal friend and as health commissioner, I will miss him greatly."

Dr. Rehder came to Mansfield Sept. 9, 1936 as assistant health commissioner, succeeding Dr. M. C. Hanson, who became commissioner. He was appointed commissioner about nine months later when Dr. Hanson resigned to accept the directorship of the Toledo health department.

He had broadened several of the services of the public health department during his five years as commissioner.

Foremost of these probably was the establishment of a tuberculosis sanitarium in Mansfield. He also set up with the co-operation of the county medical society, the "public health hour," an innoculation program for diphtheria for families in the lower-income brackets.

The venereal disease clinic was enlarged and a night clinic for working persons established under his term of office.

He was also instrumental in obtaining passage of legislation making mandatory the immunization of all school children against smallpox. The action followed an outbreak of the disease here three years ago.

Dr. Rehder was born in Grand Island, Neb He attended Grand Island college and earned his Bachelor of Arts degree in 1925. After serving as athletic director and mathematics instructor for four years in a Nebraska high school he entered the University of Nebraska. He received his degree in medicine from that institution in 1933.

He later went to Milwaukee where he specialized in pediatrics before entering public health work.

He was a member of the county, state and American Medical societies, and only last month was elected president of the Ohio Federation of Public Health Officials. He was to have taken office next year.

He and Mrs. Rehder were married June 19, 1933.

She was Mansfield chairman of the sale of Christmas seals for the Richland county Tuberculosis association, and had been active in Y. W. C. A. work.

Before coming to Mansfield she had been a teacher at a school for underprivileged children in Milwaukee.

She received her B. A. degree from the University of Wisconsin. She was a member of the Richland County Medical Society auxiliary and the American Association of University women. She was a member of the Baptist church at Council Bluffs, Ia.

KEEPS EYE ON COST OF LIVING

OPM Ready To Take Action If Food, Clothing and Rent Continue To Climb.

may be seriously hampered. In an official bulletin, the OPM says "fill your coal bin early this summer instead of waiting for fall or winter." And a nationwide poster program to "plug" the "buy coal now" drive is planned.

According to the OPM's consumers division, the average family living costs increase one per cent from mid-March to mid-April. The increase, it is said, is mainly due to a 2.2 per cent increase in food costs and .2 per cent increases in clothing and fuel charges. The advances continued in the food line through May 27, the latest date on which statistics are available.

Food costs last month, it is estimated, were 5.3 per cent above the same month last year. Eggs and butter are each about 20 per cent higher in retail price than last May. Oranges increased seasonally, beef prices declined but the price of pork, pork chops, bacon, lard, coffee, sugar and lamb were boosted.

Henderson's action in asking the 12 major bakeries not to increase bread prices—it was tantamount to an order—is being extended to all bakeries through the country. It foreshadows further action along the same lines.

Eggs and dairy products, (the later include cheese) may have their prices pegged because of the need to ship those products to Great Britain. Sugar, cocoa and tea also may give government food experts some headaches because of lack of ocean shipping facilities. The coffee market has been going up steadily and its rise may lead to action that will set a precedent for controls on food imported into the U. S.

Henderson's office also is appealing to mayor of cities to set up fair rent control committees to prevent skyrocketing of rents. Some rents have increased 100 per cent but the average is from 20 to 40 per cent in defense areas.

Unless rent control committees are established soon and are able to control the situation, legal steps are to be taken. Rent control, it said, is important because it generally takes up one-fourth of the family income.

The control of clothing prices, as in the case of shoes, will be exerted through placing of ceilings on charges for raw materials. But if this fails, and profiteering starts by retailers, the government is going to step in with wider and more drastic measures. At the same time, the number of styles available in clothes will be cut, in some cases as much as five or six times.

BOARD VACATES ROAD DESPITE PROTESTS OF 20 FARM OWNERS

Despite the protests of nearly 20 property owners in Worthington and Monroe townships, Richland county commissioners yesterday vacated the Butler-Newville-McCurdy road near the Pleasant Hill dam following a two-hour hearing at the courthouse.

The road, approximately three miles long, will be abandoned July 7. Three bridges on the road have already been sold by the county and will be removed.

The delegation of property holders in the area served by the route contended that a replacement road does not adequately serve them as an outlet to their markets.

The new road, built by the federal government, parallels the old road just north of the Pleasant Hill dam. Farmers in the area asked that the new route be extended eastward into Ashland county to give them a satisfactory outlet.

Others in the district told the commissioners that the new road has a steep hill that will be impassable in the winter and that the road is longer and less convenient than the road which was vacated.

Capt. F. H. Falkner, represenaing the federal government at yesterday's hearing, told the delegation that conservancy district officials "probably made promises to you that can't be kept and the only procedure now is to abandon the old road and give you the best substitute we can."

The new road will be turned over to the county for maintenance after it is completed this summer by the federal government.

We Lose a Capable Servant

SO OFTEN is it said, on the death of a well-known resident, "the community will feel the loss keenly" that the phrase has become a bit trite.

Still, the automobile-truck crash in Nebraska yesterday that cost the life of Health Commissioner Roy C Rehder and Mrs. Rehder, must be described thus. Mansfield WILL feel keenly the loss of both Dr. and Mrs. Rehder.

Public health has become an increasingly important phase of modern civilization of late. More and more of the public welfare has been entrusted to public health workers.

A list of the activities, many of his own developing, that Dr. Rehder supervised in Mansfield and the county might be recited, but the fact that he was president-elect of the Ohio Federation of Public Health Officials seems to suffice as a measurement of his ability in his field.

Mrs. Rehder had interests along the same lines as her husband, and was active in them.

The accident that brought a violent and tragic end to a vacation trip has cost Mansfield a valuable public servant—and it is far from trite to say of Dr. Rehder that his loss will be felt keenly.

Big City Troubles

A COLUMNIST who lives in one of the big cities, and would like to walk to work, says he can't do it because there are no houses or apartments fit to live in within five miles of his job.

"I drive down to the office," he complains, "in an almost solid stream of traffic. Four lanes of cars, bumper to bumper, each with seating capacity for five or six persons, but with only one passenger—the driver. It's rather appalling when you stop to think of it. What a waste of time and energy and gasoline for one who has no reason for living five miles from his work except that there is no place to live in near his office! And when I could be enjoying a leisurely ten-minute walk."

He wants to organize a walk-to-work society for people who, like him, would prefer to live down town. He offers himself as an A-1 prospective tenant for the first good apartment house to be built within half a mile from his office. It could easily be done, he says, in some of the "blighted areas."

Fortunately this is a problem which doesn't much concern people in the smaller cities. Yet many of them are developing the same sort of situation on a smaller scale.

It will be a hopeful day when people who want to "walk to work" through pleasant streets have a chance to do so, as so many did when our American cities were younger.

Boulder Dam Makes Good

SOME TIME early in July, according to S. O. Harper, chief engineer for the federal reclamation service at Denver, water from the world's largest reservoir will begin to swirl over the spillways of the world's highest dam. Newsreel and photo service men will be on hand to record the event. That will be the moment when spring floods bring Boulder dam to fruition.

The floods have been pouring water into Lake Mead. By mid-June it had reached a level only 15 feet below the top of the dam. "There is no longer any doubt," Harper said, "but that Lake Mead will be filled to capacity."

Capacity means 30,500,000 acre-feet of water, enough to provide every man, woman and child of the nation with 67,000 gallons.

Other reclamation reservoirs in the southwest have been filling this spring, until the irrigation prospects are said to be the best in years. Furthermore, the dams that have held back the water for future use have also prevented the damage that runaway flood waters would have caused.

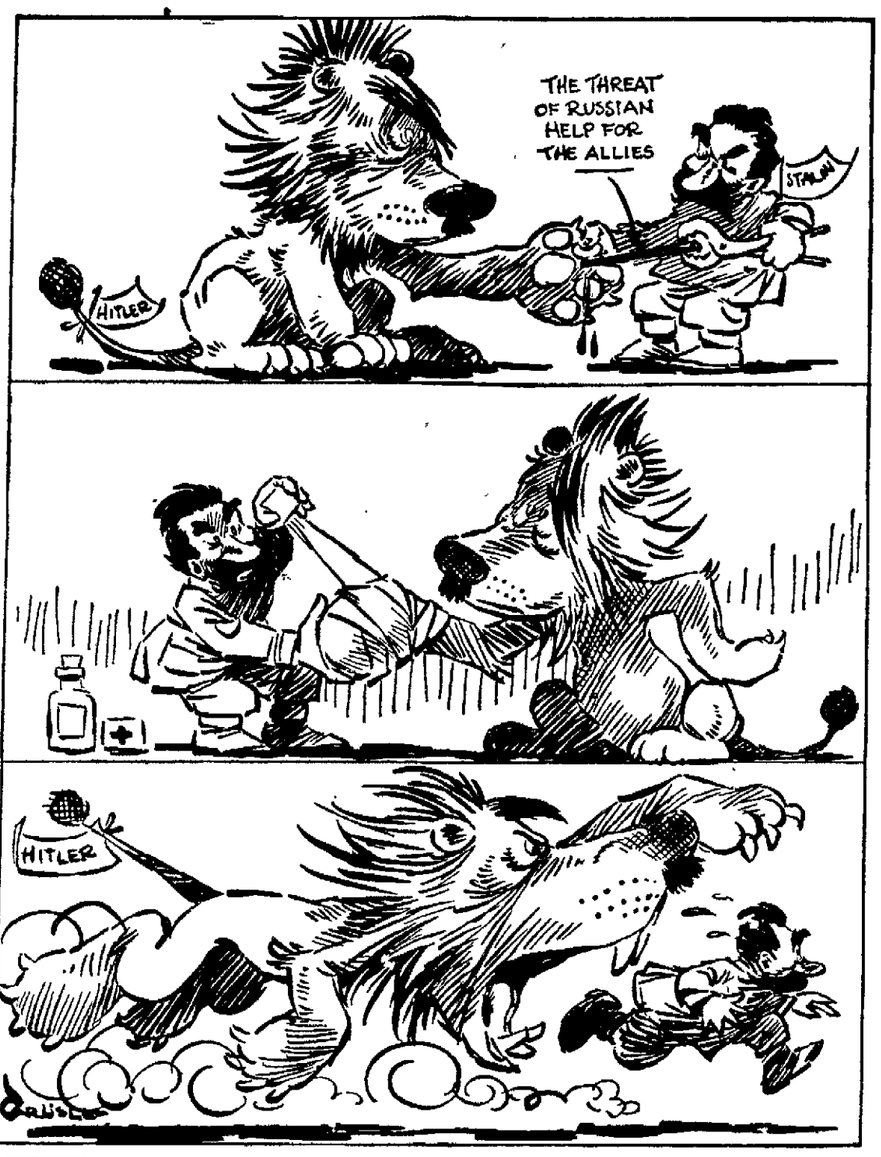
Air Safety—Have We Got It?

THERE are still people who ask whether flying is safe. Well, is motoring safe? Is railroading safe? Is swimming safe? Is walking around the block safe? Is it safe to stay at home, where so many people die in one way and another?

There is, of course, no safety except comparatively. And flying seems to make about as good a showing as any other form of transportation or sport. The Civil Aeronautics Authority, which has produced 70,000 pilots in less than three years, reports that 4,500,000 miles have been flown to every fatality.

Nobody can improve things by refusing to read bad news.

ANDROCLES AND THE GRATEFUL LION



'Good Music' for 'Boomtown'

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON — "Music—good music — for a boom-town" should be the title on any story today about Hans Kindler, conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra.

Holland-born Hans Kindler adopted America. He wasn't run out of anywhere by dictators or lack of funds or conscription laws or anything. He's "American by choice," which gave him the right to be a little shocked and stunned and ashamed that the land of his adoption had a great national capital without a symphony orchestra.

That old theatrical saying about there being three bad weeks in theater, "Easter week, Christmas week and Washington," made him blush and so when, in 1931, he was doing a concert tour in Java, Sumatra, Bali, and other South Sea islands, and was fed up with the pomp and applause of these exotic lands, he turned his back on a great concert 'cello career and came to Washington.

Called Him Crazy.

Folks told him he was crazy. We were in the depths of a depression. "When does one want music if it is not when one is depressed?" answered Kindler, and he had his way. He estimated a $35,000 boxoffice take, raised $45,000 in guarantees. At the end of his first depression season he had netted nearly $100,000 and in a year when gilt-edged stocks couldn't pay half of one per cent, the National Symphony cut a sweet little melon for its backers.

I give you this background, because without it you can't understand big, blondish Hans Kindler and his "boomtown music" which is now almost as much a part of the Washington scene as the Monument.

The Washington boom didn't start with national defense. It began several years ago. Kindler saw it coming. He saw government workers pouring in by the hundreds.

This is beginning to be a boom-town, he said, and looking ahead to trouble in Europe, he saw that it would become even more so. He started figuring. What happens to men in a boomtown? They pan gold all day and at night they want to spend some of it. What happens to people in Washington in summertime? They sweat in offices or at home all day and at night they want to get away from it all.

Estimates Were Modest.

"I couldn't start a mile-long bar—I didn't know that business. But I could give them outdoor music, down by the waterfront, where it would be cool," says Kindler.

The name "Water Gate" (originally given to that landing area where foreign diplomats and other world dignitaries could be greeted with fitting ceremony) fascinated Kindler. He went down to that stretch of lawn that slopes from the Lincoln Memorial to the Potomac. He saw the possibility of putting his orchestra on a barge just beyond the ringside. And the thing was done. Kindler and his staff counted on a maximum of 2,000 persons for that first boomtown concert. Nearly 15,000 came.

Kindler gives them soloists like glamorous Jessica Dragonette, smouldering Elsie Houston, and those soprano lovelies, Lucy Monroe and Virginia Johnson. He also gives them Beethoven, Brahms, Dvorak, Strauss and Mozart.

Everybody Goes.

If you went there tonight, you might see President Roosevelt and a White House party. You would see senators and diplomats and dollar-a-year tycoons — and their ladies. You would see local tradesmen trying to shush their kids and keep them from strewing the picnic boxes all over the lawn.

And if it's a night when there's a guest conductor, you would see big, genial Has Kindler moving from place to place among the throng, listening not to the music he knows by heart, but to the murmur of the crowd and making mental notes on how next week he'll give 'em a ballet, some Gershwin, and some Brahms — "music—good music—for a boomtown."

Listen World!

Two Kinds of Conceit

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

YOU'RE jes' wastin' your time tryin' to do anything for a guy like me," said Bill. "I'm no good—never was—never will be. Try to be different? Notta chance when you're born tough, like I was. My old man allus said I'd land up on the wrong side o' the bars before I was twenty. Well, I have. So what the hell?"

Whereupon Bill lit another cigaret, squirmed to a more comfortable position on the dingy jail cot and regarded me with a challenging eye. His tone was dismal, but that eye belied any pretense of remorse. Plainly Bill was tickled pink with the idea of being a hopelessly Bad Egg—as genuinely pleased as any great artist would be over the possession of a rare talent.

And once more I realized that there are two kinds of Egotists—POSITIVE and NEGATIVE ones. There are the people who boast about how GOOD they are, and how fortunate . . . and the people who expect medals and sweet kisses because they AREN'T.

Bill wants to hang up a record. But it takes a lot of hard work to hang up a GOOD record. One must plug long and hard—make many sacrifices—endure much monotony. And even then possibly be overlooked. Than which no fate could be more dreadful to our hero.

So Bill, at a very early age, began to make a racket of his badness. He didn't admit, even to himself, that he was making a racket of it. To the contrary, he claims always to have the best possible intentions. But secretly he was elated at the attention his deviltry received. And therefore followed each punishment with Bigger and Better Badness.

At the same time he developed this "Born Bad" theory, thus supplying himself with a perfect and permanent alibi for all cussedness, also adding glamour to his career. For if Fate has loaded the dice against you from the start, there's nothing you can do about it, and you're not only a Bad Egg but also a martyr. A most intriguing notion for all young gentlemen who fancy themselves in the villain's role.

Why is it so hard to redeem so many young toughs even when you offer them a fresh start and friendly co-operation? Because redemption would rob them of that which they cherish above everything else — their place in the spotlight. They don't want to behave—because if they did no one would pay any attention to them.

Nor does this reasoning only apply to the Bad Eggs. There's that other form of social blight—the SENSITIVE SOUL. The male or female who is always "misunderstood" . . . who "never gets a fair deal" . . . who's always being "picked upon" by the family, or the neighbors, or the boss—or God Himself! The abused wife. The neglected husband. The abused child who "never had the same chance as the other children."

You've met them, haven't you? Hundreds of times. Particularly lately. For, with Depression, their number has become legion. Nowadays whole families are making a business of being misunderstood and neglected. And when you first hear their sad story you're deeply moved. But what happened when you tried to heal their ills? Usually plenty—and all of it a pain in the neck.

For the most incurable sufferer on earth is the human who doesn't want to be cured . . . who, like Bill, uses his cussedness to gratify his conceit. You aren't doing a person like that a favor when you offer him a New Deal. You're just robbing him of his place in the spotlight—and making an enemy for yourself.

Let's Look Around

The Black Hills Passion Play

—By G. J. KOCHENDERFER

SPEARFISH, South Dakota—From all parts of the country, during the summer season, tourists hunt out this little town of Spearfish and spend a Tuesday, Thursday or Sunday night here, to enjoy the unique experience of attending the Black Hills Passion Play, a noteworthy enactment of the Luenen version, which was originally presented in Germany as much as 700 years ago.

Given in a natural amphitheater, on a mildly sloping hillside, with surrounding hills said to be remindful of those around Palestine, and with a starlit sky as a canopy, an ideal setting has been found for such a portrayal, and the seating capacity of 8,000 is sometimes needed to accommodate the visitors who make a stopover here to see the play—just as countless thousands have at some time gone to Oberammergau to see that version of the Passion Play.

For those who may be interested in the methods of portrayal of the Passion Play, in surroundings such as have been provided here, it may be mentioned that a large stage, extending the length of two city blocks, and in the architectural style of 2,000 years ago, gives a realistic setting for each of the scenes enacted, with adequate lighting directed at each point of action, from the triumphal entry of Jesus into Jerusalem, through his trials before Pilate and King Herod, the crucifixion, resurrection and ascension.

Josef Meier, who enacts the principal role of the Christus, is a native of Luenen, Westphalia, Germany, and is descended from a number of generations of ancestors who participated in this biblical drama. Since childhood his preparation has been for this role, as has long been the practice in Germany, where the Passion Play was originated in the twelfth century. Other principal roles in the cast are also taken by trained players, a number of whom are noteworthy in their interpretation of their characters—the Last Supper and the crucifixion scenes being especially impressive, as is also that of the repentance of Judas.

BUT Spearfish has more than its Black Hills Passion Play to which visitors are directed—one of these being scenic Spearfish Canyon, which cuts deeply through the surrounding Black Hills and emerges at Lead, 20 miles to the southeast—with a road that is not recommended in rainy weather.

There is also a federal fish hatchery here, and a state normal school—so, with excellent trout fishing in large and small streams and all sorts of accommodations for tourists—you can see that Spearfish really deserves more attention than you have probably ever given it.

JUST NOW, however, Spearfish is somewhat handicapped in accessibility from the west by road construction on Route 14, extending to the Wyoming state line.

Which is a reminder to mention that these western states are giving much attention of improving their highways, this being apparent in Utah, Idaho, Wyoming, and now in South Dakota.

A suggestion to readers planning a motor trip into this territory is that they make careful inquiry as to road conditions at various stages of the trip. When a secondary road out here is recommended as a "good road" it is not always the Ohio idea of what constitutes a "good road"—and when a road is spoken of as "not so good" you'd better stay off of it.

French Lesson No. 2: Select Best Men for Crucial Tasks

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

(EDITOR'S NOTE—Herewith is The Merry-Go-Round's "French Lesson" No. 2, for the American people.)

WASHINGTON—In the summer of 1939, shortly before the war started, Germany was trying to woo Russia one way while France and Britain were trying to woo her the other. Russia, everyone knew, could tip the balance for peace or war.

So the British had a military-trade mission in Moscow, the French sent some minor diplomats there—and the Germans sent a group of their most important satesmen, including Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop.

It never leaked out, but during that summer, President Lebrun of France proposed to Premier Daladier that Edouard Herriot, the Mayor of Lyons, go to Moscow as special envoy. Herriot had been Premier of France, was one of the outstanding figures of the nation, and long a great friend of Russia. Lebrun argued that if anyone could woo Russia to the French side, Herriot could do it.

But Daladier refused. He did not want to focus too much public attention upon a political rival. Herriot, he feared, might crowd him for the limelight.

The events which followed are well known. Germany brought Russia into an alliance. And (although Russia is now at war with Germany), it was this deal between Stalin and Hitler which precipitated the invasion of Poland and the war.

Perhaps Herriot might have failed in Moscow. But perhaps he could have delayed the Russo-German alliance one month — by which time the rainy season would have started in Poland. No one will ever know—because personal jealousies and politics counted in France more than public security.

French Lesson for the U. S. A.: No president of the United States, when the security of the nation is at stake, should allow personal friendships to retain officials in key positions that they are incompetent to fill.

No Enemy Aiders.

Washington newsmen, encountering a growing trend of officious censorship by military brasshats, got a kick out of a story Australian Prime Minister Menzies related during his recent visit.

One day, Menzies received a cable from London that Australian troops had made their first contact with Italians in North Africa and had acquitted themselves gallantly. Thrilled, Menzies rushed to Parliament, which happened to be in session, and read the message.

Two hours later he got another cable from a high official in London, protesting that Menzies' action had given "aid and comfort to the enemy." Menzies shot back this reply:

"If Australian troops made contact with the Italians, the Italians are fully aware of it and you can be sure it was no aid or comfort to them.

Plane Production.

That drop in plane production last month from the April high of 1,389 to 1,334 was a shock to defense chiefs, who had expected output to top 1,500. However, there was one bright spot in the otherwise sour report.

Total aircraft output was down, but a higher proportion of fighting planes were turned out last month than ever before. Previously, more trainers than fighters were produced. But in May this ratio was reversed, with 55 per cent fighters against 45 per cent trainers.

This is of utmost importance. Trainers are easily made and have never been a headache. It is fighters and bombers that present real production problems, and the relative increase last month shows that military plane output at long last is entering the mass production stage.

There were two chief reasons for the May letdown in total output—labor trouble and lack of processed aluminum.

At the Consolidated Aircraft plant, which is making urgently needed heavy bombers, a bitter AFL-CIO battle to unionize the men led to a perceptible slowdown of workers and production. But even more serious was the drop in two-and-four-motor bombers at the Boeing plant in Seattle because of an aluminum shortage. For a time work stopped there altogether.

Machine-Tools Stopped Them.

Nearly a year ago plane plants were allocated fixed amounts of the limited output of aluminum, and Boeing's May allotment fell short of requirements. It was impossible to make up the deficiency—as a result, in turn, of the long Allis-Chalmers strike.

The Milwaukee machine-tool plant makes aluminum fabricating machinery. Production of ingot aluminum has risen steadily, reaching 52,000,000 pounds in May, which was ample for current needs. But there wasn't enough machinery to process it.

Defense chiefs promise firmly that this month's plane showing will be different, with the total up around 1,500 in July and even better gains in August. By October it is predicted plane output will hit 2,000.

These forecasts are based on the imposition of stiffer priorities on fabricated materials necessary for bombers, thus ensuring unhampered production for speeded up schedules. Practically half of this month's aluminum output, 53,000,000 pounds, has been assigned to plane production.

British output is around 1,500 a month. Once the U. S. reaches the 2,000 level, the combined total will give the democracies equality with the Nazis in plane-making capacity.

Capital Chaff.

One of the strongest foes of war in President Roosevelt's inner circle of defense advisers is Bernard Baruch, head of the 1917 War Industries board. Baruch believes the U. S. is not prepared to wage large-scale military action. . . . Two potent lobbies are currently giving Washington the blitz. One is a utility lobby fighting the St. Lawrence power development; the other is made up of realty men who want to move some of the permanent government agencies, such as the Federal Power commission and SEC, out of crowded Washington and into vacant office buildings in New York, Chicago and other centers . . . One way to tell if the president is in the White House, is to look at the main flagpole. If the flag is flying, he is at home; if not, he's out of town.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK — On paper, the American Concert association seems just like any other musical organization, except for this fact—back of it stands a thoughtful young man who has found how to make cultural entertainment pay.

He is Reed Lawton, baritone, who is turning to account his experiences and observations in Italy, in France, in Germany, and in those other continental centers where so many Americans for generations have gone to study opera.

The study of opera and travel is expensive. It is prohibitive when a world is at war. It shuts doors even to those who have the means for leisurely study.

Lawton's idea was to open new doors — not to ancient European halls but to new yet eager American audiences—and it works like this:

1. In forming the American Concert association he gathered to himself a wide range of notable talent—the Westminster choir, for instance; the duo pianists Fray and Braggiotti . . . He got John Tyers, the baritone; he secured the services of the Edwin Strawbridge ballet, and Henrietta Schumann, pianist . . . He secured many others.

2. Next, he went into the towns of the East, the South, and the midwest. He set up organizations in each of those towns, sponsored by civic authorities and the leading citizens, the bankers and the ministers.

3. These organizations each arranged a series of three concerts. The concerts were $1 each. The tickets were sold in blocks of three.

4. Lawton's next move was a careful search for talent of a high order but which was unknown. . . . He ferreted out those people who would have been spending their time and their money in European opera classes if war had not kept them at home.

These unknown artists, whose successes seem assured once they have found their way to the public, will receive the benefits of Lawton's association.

For instance: one of the concerts in each city will feature the famous Westminster choir. Another will feature one or more of these young, unknown artists. And Lawton himself will take over in the third.

LAWTON'S remuneration is determined in this manner. Suppose 700 blocks of tickets, amounting to $2,100, are sold in a particular town. The Westminster choir, in great demand, will have to be paid something like $1,500 for its single appearance. That leaves $600. Lawton then sends one of his accomplished young proteges, giving them entry to the public which they otherwise could not obtain. And instead of taking money for the privilege, he'll pay them, say, $200. That leaves $400. Well, that $400 is Lawton's, for he himself is the American Concert association.

At the moment he has concerts arranged in 27 towns. Before the summer is over he is sure he will have at least 50 towns.

Not bad; not by any means.

A Farmer's Diary

Little Wild Ducks

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

DOWN along our little stream, the other evening at dusk, I came upon a mother wild duck. I surprised her as I came suddenly around the base of a willow, and she startled me as she quickly took to flight. I saw her small gray form disappear across the pool, among the branches of the nearest trees.

Then, close to my feet, I heard a little form slip into the water, another and another in rapid succession, until I counted ten ducklings gliding swiftly to cover on the quiet surface beneath a fallen trunk that almost touched the water. Dark roots protruded from the bank, and leafy sprays hung low. It was an ideal hideout for a brood of little ducks.

They could have been no more than two weeks old, yet they knew just what to do. When a branch obstructed the path of formation each tiny duck dove quickly under and bobbed up like a cork on the other side. I stood very still in the shadow of the trunk and waited. Soon the brood swam back. I feared to bat an eye, lest I should frighten them.

So silently they moved, and so well their gray new feathers blended with the murky water, that I could scarcely believe the sight I saw had such intense reality. Only one, a little bolder than the others, ducked his head beneath the glassy surface, then raised it high in the air and flapped his wings. When they swam along at equally spaced distances, they looked, from where I stood, like tiny painted boats.

It was growing darker, and in the light of the afterglow, I saw the mother return. She kept in the shadows, flew to the dense marsh grass and looked between the sprawly stems, somehow seeming to know that I was not a desirable portion of the landscape. I wondered what was going on in her feathered head—what instinct told her that a member of the human race was a danger to wild folk. Her caution seemed to tell me of yearly massacres performed by members of my kind.

Then, tired of waiting, I moved my head and warning call came from the thatch of grass. Ten little ducklings, like a flash, disappeared beneath the surface, only ripples left, to tell the course they took along the sheltered bank.

SENDS TWO TO O. S. R., ANOTHER TO STATE PEN

Judge Huston Deplores Sending Them to Institutions In View of Defense Needs.

Two men were sentenced to the Mansfield reformatory and another to the Ohio penitentiary yesterday by Common Pleas Judge C. H. Huston who told them he regretted having "to send young men like you to penal institutions for the state to keep when we need men in the army and defense industries."

The defendants who received reformatory sentences pleaded guilty to indictments returned last week by the county grand jury. Cases of three others who pleaded guilty were continued until Thursday while another was placed on probation for three years.

Sent to the reformatory were Hassel J. Meredith, 25, Parkersburg, W. Va., and Richard Griffith, 18, Mansfield. Meredith received a 10-to-25-year sentence after he pleaded guilty to an indictment for armed robbery. He admitted he and a companion held up a Shelby lunch stand proprietor and obtained about $15.

Griffith received a one-to-seven-year term after confessing he stole $72 from a purse in the home of his "girl friend."

William Lawler, 38, St. Marys, O., was sent to the penitentiary for one to 20 years after his probation was revoked. He confessed issuing bad checks after he won probation here several months ago when he was indicted for forgery.

His mother's plea helped Vernon Skinner, 23, Shelby, to win three years' probation yesterday after he pleaded guilty to an indictment for operating a motor vehicle without the owner's consent.

Judge Huston had continued Skinner's case for further investigation when the youth's mother told the court her son had a good record and asked that he be given another chance. Skinner confessed he took a car from a Shelby auto dealer's parking lot and drove it to Mansfield.

Others who pleaded guilty to indictments but whose cases were continued until Thursday were Ralph Cline, 18, accused of auto theft; Roy Hill, 29, Cleveland, indicted for auto theft; Fred Minnie, 44, Bellville, accused of issuing checks without funds; and Russell Stier, 30, held on a charge of carrying concealed weapons.

Francis Head, 37, indicted for grand larceny, pleaded innocent. No date was set for his trial.

All of the defendants brought into court yesterday were named in open indictments, but it was understood that two or three of them were also indicted secretly on second and third charges.

'WE ESCAPED' TELLS STORY OF REFUGEES

Book By Neilson Describes Experiences of 12 Who Fled To America.

The meaning of undemocratic government is explained by William Neilson in his book, "We Escaped," the personal narrative of 12 refugees who fled to America.

Available at the Mansfield Public library this recent edition tells what kind of a life these refugees were living in a Fascist state and how they found that life impossible.

Burnham Finney, editor of the American Machinist, discusses the progress of industry in carrying out the administration's defense program in "Arsenal of Democracy," another new title at the library.

Other new books in circulation include THE GODS AND ONE by Alberta Hannum is a captivating story—with many delightful characters—of the Carolina mountaineers and, particularly of Darby, a girl who found that life was full of unexpected turns, that it was not always happy and simple, but that it was occasionally exciting and beautiful. The pride and poverty, the speech and landscape of the mountain world are authentically reproduced.

A junior college for girls forms the setting of Dorothy Walworth's novel, FEAST OF REASON, which deals with problems that all parents, teachers and students, whatever their stand on progressive education, have to meet, and it deals with them in terms of their human results. Light entertainment.

THE RIVER RISES by Helen Abbott Beals is an unusual novel of New England. Hollice and David Meade, expecting to return to David's parsonage in Enbro where he as born, find that the old town is about to be flooded to make a reservoir, and that the chief engineer is a former admirer of Hollice, who still finds his dark charm disturbing.

OTHER FICTION: SIXTEEN DAYS by Habe; LADY IN LILAC by Shane; MIDWAY TO MURDER by Yates.

AMAZON THRONE by Bertita Harding is the story of the Braganzas of Brazil. By recording, intimately and in the most human terms the biographies of Brazil's three colorful emperors, the author of Phantom Crown, covers the history of that country during the greater part of the 19th century. To many Americans this dramatic account of a European Dynasty that established itself in the Western Hemisphere, will come as new and exciting reading.

MY NARROW ISLE by Sumie Seo Mishima is the story of a modern woman in feudal Japan. It is a true account of the life of a Japanese woman, who, educated in America, returns to her own country eager to work for international understanding through teaching and writing. The theme is built upon her valiant struggle against the deeply ingrained feudal system in Japan.

Two Junior Guild selections for older boys and girls are now in circulation at the Mansfield Public Labrary. They are:

GYPSY GOES TO COLLEGE by Chesley Kahman — Mizela, a gypsy, promised her father that she would go to college at least one year, even though she knew she would hate it. What a strange life for a girl who was used to the freedom of the outdoors! At first Mizella did not fit in with the other students. But in the new little world of courses, dates and college elections. Mizella cannot help but see things in a different light. What will Mizella's decision about her future be? The events during the evening of the June prom make a perfect solution.

POWER, FROM START TO FINISH by Franklin & Claire Reck—This is a story of true adventure, of men who dared to experiment in order to use water, wind, steam, electricity, oil, and coal, to create a new world for us all. This fascinating book tells about the first men to harness river currents, of Egyptians who, several years before Christ, used a waterwheel to irrigate their land. What great scientists have done with power and the dream they cherish for the future is the theme of this book.

STAR by Fletcher, CHILDREN AND THE THEATER by Fisher.

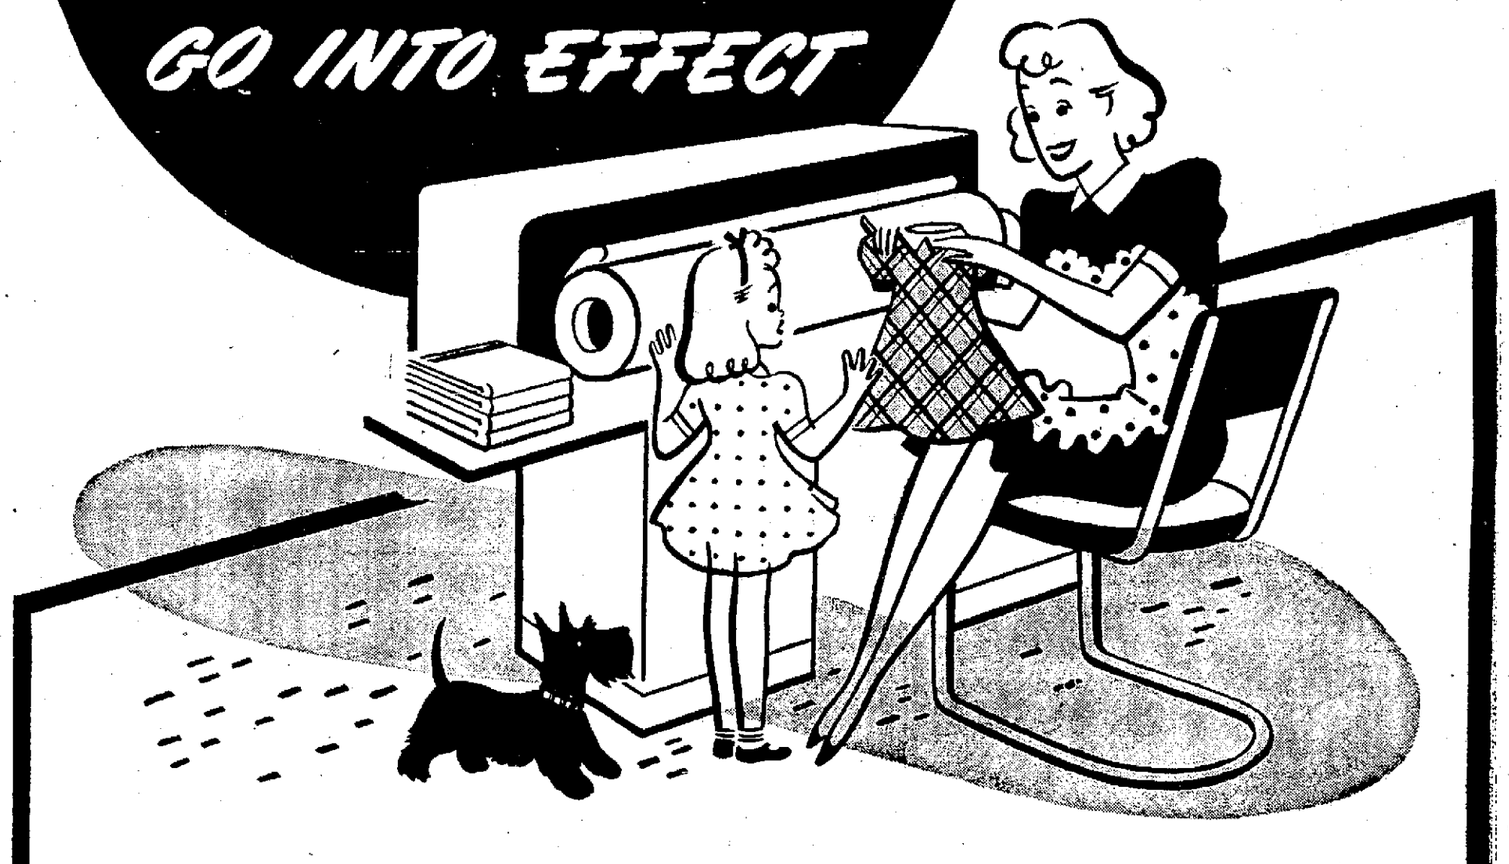
MANSFIELD'S

New Low

Electric Rates

GO INTO EFFECT

You can enjoy the CONVENIENCE, EASE-OF-USE, and BETTER RESULTS of an ELECTRIC IRONER . . . *without increasing your electric service bill!



● Think of the fun of sitting down to iron! Think of not having to stand up any longer, bending over an ironing board, getting all tired out pushing an iron over your clothes. You can eliminate all the foot-wearying, arm-tiring, laborious work of ironing today by buying one of the new, automatic electric ironers.

But more important to you, when Mansfield's new, low electric rates go into effect soon, you will be able to operate one of the new electric ironers without increasing your electric service bill over the amount you are now paying. In other words, you can enjoy all the fun of sitting down to iron, yet not have to pay for it. That's a sure way to get more enjoyment out of life!

If you are one of the fortunate homemakers who already own an electric ironer there are other electrical servants you can put to work without increasing your electric service bill. For example, you can cook with an electric roasterette, or enjoy the beauty and protection of a sight-saving I. E. S. lamp, or even operate a 1941 model electric refrigerator for 20 days. Check the many electrical servants you can put to work in your home doing the hard, tiring tasks of housework for you. Then buy one or more of them and enjoy life more without adding a cent to your present electric service bill.

* Based on the average use by the average family if you are now paying from $1.85 to $2.60 a month for electric service. The amount of extra kilowatt hours you can use without increasing your bill depends on your present usage.

The affair was held at the Draffan home, Ballylin Farms, with Misses Frances and Margaret Strickler as hostesses. Following the picnic supper a short business session was held at which time Mrs. Marie Douglas, delegate to the national sorority convention held in Chicago last week, gave a report on the activities. The remainder of the evening was spent socially. The date and place of the next meeting will be announced later.

Successful Marriage Real Achievement

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Successful marriage is getting to be a more and more of a rare achievement in modern times. The one marriage in six that went on the rocks is now accumulating some fractions.

When a couple lives happily together for fifty years and more, then dies within a few hours of each other—that's news. It would be news even if the couple were less well known than the distinguished editor, Negley Cochran and his wife.

Girl meets boy; they love, they marry and begin the struggle to keep a home and to rear their children to the best of their ability. Millions never have the patience, the real love, and the character to take this relationship seriously. They try it for a year or two—then off to Reno.

I know that nothing is achieved by dragging the chains of hatred through the years; that sometimes a legal separation becomes as necessary as a surgical operation. But it's never a happy solution to those promises that were made in good faith.

It is not given to many couples to live together in happiness for 52 years, as the Cochrans did. But some people remain married in spirit, even after death has separated them. A neighbor of mine in Virginia, when she was past 70 years of age, was cultivating a beautiful bed of petunias, lovely as a rainbow. I wondered at the patience of this frail little old lady in cherishing that garden and keeping it so beautifully.

She gave me a radiant smile and said, "Fred and I started to grow petunias in our first home. My children have married and gone away; some of them have died. But every spring my husband and I seem nearer together when I work among the flowers he loved."

Did you smile when you read in Strachey's "Life of Queen Victoria" that she kept her husband's room just as he had left it? Indeed, if memory serves me, I think there was something told in those memoirs about hot water brought to the late Prince Consort's dressing room, at the same hour his shaving water was brought during their long married life.

Yes, that little anecdote had a grimly humorous slant. But when all has been said about the valiant old queen and her pride, her ambition and her arrogance, she managed to do her part magnificently. She could not abide some of her ministers—Gladstone, for instance. She said he used to address her as if she were the house of commons. But she got along with him on the surface, at least, and she was no appeaser.

So, without being in the least sentimental, one feels that this old lady, Queen of Great Britain, Empress of India, had life's best possession in the bridelike devotion she felt for her handsome and gifted Albert, during their number of married years. And bereaved of his companionship, she remained married to him in spirit to the end.

ST. LOUIS—(INS)—Mrs. Viola Renz, 40 year old housewife of Affton in St. Louis county, recently became the only woman taxi driver in the city of St. Louis where her brother Arthur le Baube is proprietor of a single cab service.

Mrs. Renz became a taxi chauffeur to take the place of her 23-year-old brother, Wilfred le Baube, when he was drafted for military service.

She relieves her father, Alexander le Baube, who drives the morning shift from 1 to 5 p. m. She then goes home to prepare dinner for her husband who is a truck driver.

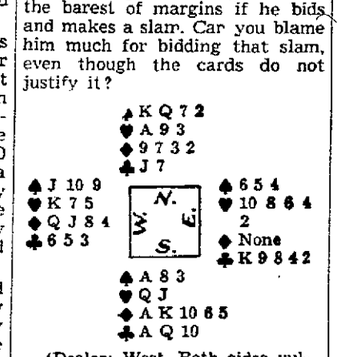
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

A TIME TO REBID

There are times when a player just naturally must overbid, if he is a humar being. Suppose, if you can, a fellow who has a tremendous winning streak—say 13 consecutive rubbers. Then suppose in the fourteenth rubber, his side seems to be beaten, having taken several sizable sets in order to keep the opponents from winning it. Along comes the rubber game. His partner gets him to a game contract. He takes a look at the score and sees his streak is broken is he makes the contract, but that he can keep the string alive by the barest of margins if he bids and makes a slam. Can you blame him much for bidding that slam, even though the cards do not justify it?



(Dealer: West. Both sides vulnerable.)

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	Pass	1 ♦
Pass	1 ♠	Pass	3 ♦
Pass	4 ♦	Pass	6 ♦
Dbl

South happens to be this writer, who won all six rubbers one evening in a pivoting social game, did the same with another social group a few evenings later, then took his thirtenneth straight in the first of another social bridgefest. After his partner had bid 4-Diamonds here, he noticed that his side could win the rubber by exactly 40 points—a "nothing" rubber—if the slam got doubled and made. So he bid it, and West obligingly doubled, as who wouldn't?

The spade J was won by the A and the diamond A laid down, revealing the bad break. The heart Q was led, covered by the K and A, then the club J covered by the K and A. Deciding then to play West for all four trumps, and three cards in each other suit, he took tricks with the heart J, spade Q, heart 9 ruffed, club Q club 10 and spade K, then led the diamond 9 to the J. West had to lead away from his own trumps, making the contract and prolonging the streak to 14 consecutive rubbers. Here's hoping for the fifteenth!

HOROSCOPE

For Wednesday, June 25.

According to the lunar and mutual aspects this day should be a pleasant and profitable one, with surprising angles developing in both business and personal ventures. In fact things may be exciting and thrilling, especially in all concerning the young and romantic, with possible sudden engagements, even elopements, although even platonic friendships may prove dramatic or exceptional. An expansive vibration favors new and audacious activity.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a profitable, happy and thrilling year, with many ardent desires reaching long cherished fulfillment. The romantic, social and financial status are under progressive and expansive rule, with the young and ambitious especially flourishing, probably by change, travel, or high enterprise having novelty and originality, the dramatic elements figuring conspicuously and enduringly.

A child born on this day should have much versatility, originality and ambition, probably in unique or audacious fields. It should be successful and happy in all its aspirations and efforts, with much change and excitement.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

I handed my note directly to the leader, who read it, nodded again, and then beckoned Gus to his side. At the same time he issued an order to his men.

"Stand in front of this bird, boys, so that nobody coming through here can see him," he said.

The men obeyed, stationing themselves in such fashion that the gangster's unconscious figure was completely concealed. Then followed a low colloquy with Gus, who at once departed for the other room.

It was less than a minute before he came back. Olga and Philip following him through the door disguised as a panel. Olga, her face showing the nervous tension which had been hers, rushed up to me, but stopped short as her keen eyes swept my face.

Olga Alarmed About Madge

"Something has happened to Madge, Philip!" she exclaimed.

"What did that fiend do to you, my dear?" she asked.

I knew there was no use trying to keep back the truth, so I took her arm and pulled her into the living room, Philip following closely. Then, when the doors were closed, I found voice to croak:

"I—am—all—right. He choked—me a bit—tht is all. If you—don't mind, I'll write—what I—have to say."

"Oh! you poor darling! what can I do?" Olga exclaimed, with horror in her voice. But Philip Veritzen found outlet in picturesque profanity.

"You must have a physician at once," he said, when he had exhausted his vocabulary. Then he started for the telephone, throwing a question over his shoulder. "Did he get away?"

"Think, my Philip," Olga said, "would all of those men have been standing there if he had gotten away?"

At the same instant I grasped his sleeve and held him fast.

"Doctor in five minutes, yes," I croaked, "but just now, read this."

I scribbled rapidly on my pad of paper, tore off the sheet and handed it to him. He gave his wife a deferential little nod when he had taken it from me.

"Shall I read this aloud to you?" he asked.

"Please!" she answered, and he repeated what I had written:

"I don't need a doctor, although I'll have one if you wish it. But first we must dispose of that gangster. He is lying unconscious in the next room. One of the men blackjacked him when he was choking me. How can we get him out of the hotel?"

Philip gave a little grunt of satisfaction when he had finished reading my note.

"I wish he'd killed him," he said vengefully.

"If he had, my Philip," Olga reminded him, "the man couldn't be questioned about this affair."

Veritzen Takes Charge

"You are right, as always," he said with a little bow to her. Then, without answering my written message, he went to the telephone and called the manager.

"Please come up to Mrs. Graham's suite immediately," he said.

When he turned from the telephone he spoke reassuringly.

"It won't be necessary for you to speak at all," he said. "If you and Olga will sit over there"—he indicated a corner of the room—"you nod to Milner or smile at him. I'll tell him everything that is necessary."

Correcting Child Not a Quick Job

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

We who write and talk to parents are inclined to take it for granted that up to now they had proceeded about ideally in the guidance of the child. But as a matter of fact, the average parent who takes our advice seriously has not, or thinks she has not, done all things well. She often feels dejected. She resolves to make over the child, even herself, within a short while. In doing so she may attempt to apply literally the advice she has read or heard.

I suppose we specialists have erred in making her feel so downcast. We have too greatly magnified the faults she thinks she has and we have failed to remind her that she has been doing scores of things exceptionally well, even better, perhaps, than we could do them. Her virtues and achievements furthermore might greatly outweigh a few shortcomings we had made so much ado about. I sincerely hope I don't cause my readers to become too hard on themselves. Rather I wish I might help them to see more of the good traits they have as parents which they tend to overlook or count as unimportant.

Change Takes Time

We experts, furthermore, generally fail to caution parents against hoping to change themselves or a child easily or within a short while. We also fail to remind them that, however desirable a change in the child's particular habits and attitudes, or their methods of dealing with him may be, they need to count the cost, to consider how likely they are to succeed in any corrective measures before launching them.

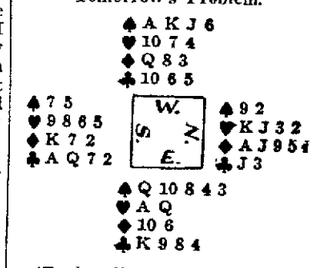
In many a home certain things that are very desirable better not be attempted at all since they offer resistances that can hardly be overcome, or are overcome at too great cost to all concerned. If, for example, one parent is out of sympathy with the other in regard to the child's management, some very desirable goals in respect to this child cannot be attained, nor should they be attempted. Only try those things that can be done with the least amount of family tension and the greatest amount of family satisfaction.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. "I am 12 years old. I count on my fingers. Please send me your two sheets of addition and subtraction facts. I want to learn them by heart so I will stop counting on my fingers."

A. The 100 addition and 100 subtraction facts are enclosed. Attack only four or five each evening and learn all the addition facts before beginning on the subtraction facts. Any one else may receive these sheets by writing me at 235 East 45th street, New York City, enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it.

Tomorrow's Problem.



(Dealer: East. North-South vulnerable.)

After West leads the diamond K and then the diamond 7 to the J, against South's normally bid 3-Spades, why should East not lay down his diamond A?

The Secret of the Marshbanks + + +

By Kathleen Norris

(Copyright, 1941)

CHAPTER XXIII

Cherry cleared her throat and Fran turned swiftly. She smiled automatically when she saw Cherry, and ended her conversation.

"I have to stop now," she said. "Goodbye, Kelly." And she turned to Cherry with just a little unusual color in the pure ivory of her face. "We wanted you today,'" she said, "I was over in Sausalito."

Confused, troubled thoughts made Cherry absent-minded all the evening long, made her start when one of the bridge players reminded her that it was her turn to deal, made her look now and then at Amy with eyes that seemed to see her for the first time.

Martin appeared at half past eight with the announcement that there was a gentleman to see Miss Rawlings. That would be the fascinating Gogo, Cherry thought, looking at Amy with a laugh. This was another small instance of Amy's subtlety, Cherry thought; she told the caller to ask for "Miss Rawlings." But Amy, departing in a flutter, returned immediately in disappointment, to say that it was Kelly Coates, and that he wanted to see Cherry for just a minute.

Cherry might have hesitated under other circumstances, for her heart was sore on the subject of Kelly. But the two men resigning themselves to a three-handed game in her absence, and Amy conjecturing that it was some message for Fran, she could not quite send back an excuse, and so went to the smaller library and found Kelly standing, turning over the leaves of a magazine on the table.

Kelly sensed at once that Cherry was not happy, and interrupted his first greeting with a disturbed "What's the trouble, Marchioness?"

"Nothing. And it's so nice to see you, Kelly. It's been weeks!"

"Are you telling me that?" said Kelly. "It's been more than two months; it's seemed like years!"

She could not help it. The sun came out when she was in his company; the world seemed safe and right.

"Well, as soon as we got back you went to Honolulu," she reminded him, deep in a corner of the big davenport now, with Kelly in a chair near by, and their hands linked.

"To paint three adorable children, and receive a neat little check for fifteen hundred, plus traveling expenses," Kelly said.

"Oh, Kelly, that was good! Did Fran see it today?"

"No," he answered absently, "Cherry, what's been going on? You're thinner, you're grown up, you're a peculiarly—well, taking woman with your blue eyes and your mixed-up hair and the way your mouth goes! But who's been mean to you?"

"Nobody's been mean to me. And our trip. . . ."

She began to tell him about it, feeling that delicious eagerness with which she always talked to Kelly. When she came to the end of the journey, and the long afternoon talk in Emma's cabin, she saw his interest intensify and was presently interrupted.

"So you're Amy Marshbanks? Great Allah!"

"No proof, Kelly."

"What good would proof do? . . . Oh, I see," he said, "if there were proof, you'd come in for considerable property; I forgot that. Well, there may be some proof somewhere."

"No, but there's not. There was. At least, we think there was." Then she told him the rest of the story.

"How'd the judge know that was in that will or statement, or whatever it was?" Kelly asked.

"He didn't know; he said so. His brother had told him what it was, but only when he was partly delirious, when he was dying."

"So that it mightn't have meant anything to you at all?"

He mused for a few minutes, still holding the warm young hand that clung to his so tightly, and then said, on a curious note: "Odd if you were suddenly to have a great deal of money, Cherry."

"Odd! And I don't especially want it," Cherry said. "Tonight I didn't have time to think about having all that Wellington money. But I never think in terms of real wealth—I mean jewelry and fur coats and a personal maid, all that. But I did think—oh, well, being able to travel, simply, you know, and some day buying a home somewhere. That sort of thing."

"There's something very likable about you tonight, Cherry," Kelly said, his eyes on the earnest face under its fluff of streaked gold and brown hair, the slender, finely built figure, the blue eyes of eagerness and intelligence and light. She had on a short striped gray and blue silk tonight; a tangle of silver and blue bells hung about her throat like a wide collar, and another bunch of the same bells was twisted about her wrist. "I like that getup," he approved.

"Fran gave me this. It was too big for her. I'm glad you like it."

"And I approve of you. By gum," said Kelly with simplicity, "you do manage to stand the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune about as well as any human being I ever knew! You're one person and then you're another, an aunt turns up, an uncle turns up, a father and grandmother and cousin appear out of the void, you're Cherry Rawlings looking for a job, and then you're Amelia Marshbanks with a pot of money, and then an old lady tears up a paper and you're back again. And you stand it all, and you laugh, and you've kept your sense of humor. . . ."

Sudden tears were in her eyes, although they were smiling. She kept her firm grip upon his big fingers.

"I don't do much. But I'm growing up," said Cherry. "Rebecca and I are thinking of opening a prep school. Coaching for college entry. She had a swell—she had a really flattering offer," Cherry corrected herself punctiliously, "from a Santa Barbara place, but we thought, why not do it ourselves instead, up here? So her mother's going to give us two big rooms to start with, and —Kelly, what are you thinking about?"

"Wishing I saw more of you, Cherry. Now today it was lovely, over our way. A fellow I used to know in Oxford is here with me for a few days—I had to bring him to town for a dinner tonight, but I ducked the dinner—and we had lunch by the fire. . . ."

"Fran wanted me to go," Cherry put in. Her heart was singing. He had not been alone with Fran today, after all.

"Well, why the deuce didn't you come, then?"

"I couldn't, Kelly. I've an eleven on Saturday. I didn't come in until after four."

"We'd have loved it. He's a great fellow, Lefanu. Sixty, you know, and he's been everywhere. I've not seen Fran," Kelly said, considering, "in weeks. I've not seen Fran since one day in September when I met her downtown, shopping."

"You mean until today?"

"I didn't see Fran today, Cherry."

"You didn't?"

"Nope. What made you think I had?"

"Why, she—she said so. She told the judge so."

"Told him I'd been here today?"

"Told him she'd gone to Sausalito today. And she told him—or he understood it that way—that I'd gone too. That's funny," Cherry said, her eyes shining in the soft lamplight and firelight, "because she made quite a point of it. She said that on account of the chauffeur being over there all day—But, Kelly," she broke off, suddenly remembering, "you did telephone Fran tonight, didn't you? Didn't you call her up from downstairs here about seven?"

"From downstairs here! We didn't leave Sausalito until after seven."

"But then—but then—" Cherry stammered, bewildered, "why did she call somebody 'Kelly?' I'd just come into the room, and she saw me too, and yet she said 'Kelly' as distinctly as I'm saying it now. She had turned around with the telephone and looked right at me, and said something about it being dangerous for you to be here, and 'Goodbye, Kelly'."

"Then she said it for you to hear, Cherry. I'm no sleuth, but it seems to me that was a plant."

"But then who was she talking to?"

"Her latest," Kelly said briefly, with a wry smile.

"But—but I can't believe it!" Cherry said, under her breath. "Oh, Kelly," she went on innocently, "isn't it fun to be sitting here talking about it, and telling each other things!"

"I think it's fun," he agreed.

"Some day let's have another day in Sausalito. I like it so!"

"Whenever you say, Marchioness. But I should imagine," Kelly said, "that the judge will do some investigating — some pussyfooting in your behalf—and you'll be a busy woman here. He's got to protect his mother, of course, but he'll move heaven and earth to see that in spite of her you get your rights. I'll tell you what I think he'll do," Kelly interrupted himself to say with conviction, "he'll talk to Amy; he'll tell her the whole story. And then he'll get an adjustment out of court, a division of the property. Amy doesn't need it all. . . ."

"Amy may," Cherry said rather ruefully, in a pause, "she's head over heels in love with this Sicilian, count that's been going the rounds—Mario Constantino."

"Not Public Bounder Number One?"

"The same."

Cherry stood up. "I just heard Martin showing someone in, and I think it's Gogo. Come on in and meet him. I want to know what you think of him!"

They had joined hands as they walked through the hall, but Cherry loosened her fingers when they reached the others. Gogo was indeed there, dark, stunning, mustachioned, very much at ease, and with him had come two other, not very attractive, younger men. The bridge game had ended; they were sitting about the fire, drinking highballs and listening to the story of a boar hunt in which Gogo, according to his own account, had acquitted himself to advantage.

Kelly and Cherry melted into the circle but Kelly did not stay long, and when he had excused himself Cherry went upstairs, too, feeling herself happier, in an irrational, all-pervading way, than she had ever been in her life before. He didn't love Fran; he didn't love Fran!

"I beg your pardon!" Cherry was startled by a voice that addressed her as she crossed the upper hall. It was the elder Mrs. Marshbanks who had spoken. She was standing in her bedroom doorway. "I asked if you would step into my room a moment?" the old lady said.

Oh, Kelly, come back, come back! Cherry's thoughts called desperately. She felt an impulse of actual terror. She went slowly into the luxurious warm bedroom, and at the invitation of her companion took a chair.

"I wanted to speak to you," said Mrs. Marshbanks. "I have tried before this to let you see how—how obnoxious your presence is in this house. I never would have countenanced it in the first place. For reasons that only he understands my son has taken the position that this family owes you something. Owes you! You have received a hundred times more than anything to which you were entitled already. You wormed your way in here, you made friends, you knew in your scheming little miserable soul that every time you were here I refused to leave my rooms. That didn't stop you; you came anyway! You've come between me and my granddaughter. It's 'Oh, Cherry's such fun Gran,' and 'You don't understand Cherry, Gran,' until I'm sick of it.

"Now you've come between me and my son. He talked to me tonight as no man ever should talk to a woman, least of all his mother! You came to him with your story of babies changed in their cradles, you to inherit all that belongs to Amy—no proof, of course, no proof! And so Amy's to be disgraced—ousted from her place. . . ."

"You can't talk to me this way!" Cherry said, on her feet. "Good night, Mrs. Marshbanks!"

"No, don't go. Don't go, or I'll tell this whole household what you came here today to do. . . ."

An abrupt stop, and a silence. Amy had called Cherry from the hall.

"Amy, come in here!" her grandmother said.

"Mrs. Marshbanks, I do beg you—!" Cherry began. "I do beg you—!"

Amy came in, bewildered by their manner and their looks.

"Amy, I've something to say to you!" Mrs. Marshbanks said.

"You knew Gago came in; Cherry told you," Amy surmised defiantly. "Well, he did, for fifteen minutes! And I don't care."

"It has nothing to do with him. Sit down, Cherry, sit down."

"I won't," Cherry said flatly. "And I beg you to wait until tomorrow and then talk to the judge about this."

BOSTON—(U.P.)—Here's a way for students to stump parents who ask the annoying question: "What did you learn at school today?"

"When papa and mamma ask that question," Prof. John C. Scammell of Boston university's English department advises his students of argumentation, "tell them that you learned an important principle in theoretical argumentation. And then for the inevitable question—'What is it?' You tell them:

"The daughter of Pharaoh's son is the son of Pharaoh's daughter.' Such a statement has been known to humble parents for months." Students say it works.

PLYMOUTH VOTE ON BOND ISSUE GETS COURT O.K.

Judge Orders School Board Officials To Sign Bonds For New Building

A contested election at Plymouth in which voters approved a $47,500 school bond issue had been ruled valid today by Common Pleas Judge C. H. Huston.

A mandamus issued by the court ordered Roy Johnson, president of the Plymouth school board, and Joseph Hodges, clerk of the board, to sign the bonds to make them legal.

Johnson and Hodges had refused to put their signatures on the bonds, contending that two errors on the ballots used in the election last March made the bonds illegal and would place the responsibility on them.

Prosecutor Harold Latz then filed an action for a mandamus, asserting that the errors were unimportant and need not interfere with the legality of the bonds.

Voters approved the bonds by a huge majority to provide the school district's share of the cost of a new elementary school building. The old building has been razed and work started on the new structure which will be erected as a National Youth administration project.

The present farm of 106 acres includes the birthplace of the Revolutionary figure, but according to records, the original home was torn down and a frame farmhause erected in later years.

It was there that Rodney spent his boyhood before going to Philadelphia in 1776, and he was buried on the family plot. Later burial was at Christ Church graveyard, Dover.

Debate Need for Widening of Seaway

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

Speaking For Myself.

EVERY time I see a new picture of Priscilla Lane she looks more and more like Ginger Rogers used to look when she looked like Ginger Rogers . . The romance, hearts, flowers and Cupid stuff that spilled all over the news pages this week — Brenda and Shipwreck, Martha and Victor, "Sonny" Whitney and his bride just goes to show that with all the news of war, bombings, sabotage and convoys, an editor can always make room on the front pages for a picture of a pretty June bride with the requisite qualities of fame or a famous husband.

Dorothy Kilgallen

I loved Damon Runyon's movie, "Tight Shoes." That script ought to be a lesson to the high-powered Hollywood writers who mull over their typewriters for six months at the edge of an ermine swimming pool; Art Arthur knocked out the screen play for "Tight Shoes" in exactly ten days!

I love to look in toy shop windows . . . I like to read old newspaper clippings on a famous news story. I could spend hours in the "morgue" imagining the excitement of the reporters sent out at the first "flash" and the excitement of the editors over whose desks the stories passed.

I've never met anyone in real life who does a "slow burn" the way movie comedians do (Edgar Kennedy is the number one example) but maybe they exist.

Wish Gertrude Niesen were singing somewhere in town.

Funniest story I've heard in ages is the true one about the slight mishap in which Hal Leroy figured in Pittsburgh recently.

He was working in a place called "The Yacht Club," which is actually a houseboat moored in the river. Jackie, Heller runs it and acts as m.c. A few days ago, Hal and Jackie went to work together —arrived at the dock, looked around for the night club, and couldn't find it!

It seems there had been a heavy rain the night before, and the club, dance floor, tables, chairs, costumes et al had washed down the river 10 miles or so.

P. S.. They got it back. . . .

There's still something very Parisian about dining at a sidewalk cafe . . . Wonder if anyone ever travels incognito anymore, and exactly what did that involve anyway? . . . I love books bound in brown leather, four posters with white muslin canopies, and lemonade with mint in it . . . I wouldn't dream of riding in a canoe. . . .

There are so many bright lights around the entrance to the Hurricane, you can scarcely see the entrance, and you almost get an incandescent third degree going in and out of the place.

It must be a horrible feeling for any legitimate actor to dream he had to cross the gigantic stage at Radio City. You could spend ten minutes making a simple exit . . . A speckled trout holds no fascination for me, dead or alive.

Of course there is a simple day to solve the double feature problem, although nobody mentions it. You just phone to find out what time the feature you want to see goes on, arrive just in time to see it, and then leave. That way, you need never know that Nelson Eddy was on the bill.

Sally Rand of the fans and Sally Rand of the drama don't look much alike, as Woodstock Playhouse audiences will find out this summer when she does stock there. Sally the dramatic actress looks as though she had worn clothes all her life. Only reminder that she was once a fan and bubble dancer is the bevy of pekingese dogs that play with balloons in her dressing room. . . . Among the things I don't like to eat is custard. . . . I pity all the poor little boys who get parts as the Day sons in "Life With Father," dye their hair carrot red, and then outgrow the part. They ought to form a little club of fire-heads.

MAYOR, AUDITOR AT ODDS OVER FIREMAN'S PAY

Locke To Seek Fund to Boost Salary of Fire Fighter Hired In Third Class.

A long controversy between Mayor William J. Locke and City Auditor Paul L. Kelley as to whether or not a city fireman, who had previous temporary service on the city department, should be paid as a third or second class member was brought into light today.

Mayor Locke announced that he would ask the finance committee of city council to consider appropriating the necessary money to pay the difference between the third class salary of Fireman Daniel D. Snider and the second class wage schedule.

Locke maintains that Snider should be considered a second class fireman because he worked for the city in 1936 while other firemen were absent through illness.

Kelley, however, has paid Snider his regular $110 monthly salary as the administration has requested each month. No formal request has been made for the increase by either the mayor or Service-Safety Director C. M. Crafton although they have made several formal queries.

Second class firemen are paid $125 monthly. Locke said he would ask the finance committee to appropriate the $175 necessary to make up the difference between the wage schedules.

Kelley pointed out that council had only appropriated enough money for a third class fireman and therefore had only intended that a third class fireman be hired. The auditor indicated that council had wanted two third-class firemen appointed and that Snider must have been aware of his status when employed.

The auditor also revealed that although the civil service commission had passed a resolution approving Snider's request for a second class membership, it was not until June 2 that he was informed of it in a letter.

Kelley called attention, however, that although the commission may approve status of city employes, it has no jurisdiction in regard to the salary they will receive. City Solicitor M. D. Ward, jr., has also expressed the opinion that the commission has no authority over the salaries paid city employes.

Although the mayor has supported Snider's request for his new status, he has not placed Snider's name on the city payrolls in the new classification.

Council, in making its appropriation for two new firemen this year, set up $2,640 to be paid to two additional firemen for the year's service. This appropriation would only pay a $110 salary monthly, the amount paid third class firemen.

The rush for enrollment in the Girl Scout day camp beginning July 8 has compelled Scout headquarters to ask for final registration Saturday. Eighty-one girls already have registered against the 25 enrolled for camp at the same time last year. It will be necessary to enroll by Saturday, according to Miss Eleanor Bond, Girl Scout executive, so that if the number of campers warrants additional counselors and increased facilities they may be obtained in plenty of time before camp opens.

Rumors were afoot in downtown Mansfield today that a "whizzer" pitcher is being run in by store managers for their annual softball game with store employes at the Retail Merchants association "Good Will" dinner at the Jeromesville high school tomorrow night. Refusal by the store managers to disclose the identity of their tosser has started reports among store employes, that "sabotage" of some sort is in the offing. The merchants will clash on the ball diamond at 6 p. m. and a chicken dinner will follow at 7 p. m. C. H. Saylor is captain of the managers' team and Orlo Smith is heading the employes' team.

W. G. Cox, naval recruiting officer, is on a spot. The marines, with whom the navy has never generated any love whatsoever, blithly informed him that on Thursday one of their men will be in Mansfield to interview applicants for recruiting and would he "please inform people." Since Cox is also in this same business, and right now could use some colored mess boys, it seems almost like a breach of etiquette to promote enlistments for the leathernecks.

SHIP CIRCLES DOUBT IF 27 FEET'S ENOUGH

Say Emergency Vessels To Be Built Here Will Have That Much Draft.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Shipping circles debate today whether the proposed 27-foot channel in the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence seaway would accommodate many of the emergency ships being built by the maritime commission.

Most of the emergency ships will have a draft of 27 feet when fully loaded, it was pointed out, causing marine experts to predict that plans for the seaway would have to be revised.

Meanwhile, administration testimony for the pending St. Lawrence development bill was concluded before the house rivers and harbors committee yesterday by Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones and Federal Power Commission Chairman Leland Olds. Opponents of the $300,000,000 project were to present testimony next.

A major administration contention in behalf of the project has been that it would make possible the construction in the Great Lakes area of ocean-going ships which could be moved out to sea via the St. Lawrence. The waterway also has been projected as a shipping route for cargoes from middlewestern industries to the Atlantic.

Debating the possibility that the channel as planned would not be deep enough, proponents of the waterway argued that few ships are ever loaded to their full draft, but other authorities pointed out that the administration has asked for authority to relax load limits on American merchantmen.

If load-line regulations for American ships are changed to permit greater utilization of cargo space for defense, many ships doubtless will operate loaded to their full draft and probably more.

Project officials said it would be a relatively simple task to dredge the channels to 30 or 31 feet if necessary, and that the 27-foot depth might be changed when construction begins.

HOLLYWOOD

—By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD—Preston Sturges tells me his "Sullivan's Travels" isn't a satire on Hollywood. And of course it isn't—it's about a highly successful comedy director (Joel McCrea) who wants to direct a serious movie, and has selected one called (in the script) "Oh, Brother, Where Art Thou?"

ROBBIN COONS

They won't let him do it, because he knows nothing of trouble or sorrow, so he goes out in search of trouble. What does he meet? Veronica Lake. But he doesn't meet trouble. It runs away from him—until all of a sudden he finds himself sentenced to the chain gang of a far-away state. Of course that's not satire, is it? It's just a pretty fable, but Sturges hasn't yet made a movie that wasn't a cheekful of tongue.

Ruth Gordon, distinguished in "Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet" and "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," will work with Garbow in that new movie comedy. . . . Boudoir hint: Lupe Velez, in her black velvet, white satin retreat, has two toy beds—one black, one white—for her black and white Chihuahuas. . . . George Murphy, who had about given up hope of getting another dancing role in movies, gets one in "Panama Hattie" with Ann Sothern—he's leading man, too.

REGIS TOOMEY, now coming back strong, used to be a leading light of early talkies. Then Hollywood began passing him by. In the slump, he set himself one rule to follow for a year.

"I'll never get anywhere playing in unimportant pictures," he said, "even if I get leading parts. I'll play anything—one day, two days' work, anything—in an important picture."

He didn't work too often, after that, but he stuck to it. When DeMille gave him a bit in "Union Pacific," he played it with gusto. One day Frank Capra asked him to take a "small bit" in "Meet John Doe." He played it for a new career—in "Dive Bomber" and now "Law of the Tropics."

WAITS SENTENCE IN MAIL FRAUD

Cemetery Lot Promoter Pleads Guilty In $1,000,000 Mail Swindle.

(By United Press)

CLEVELAND — Christian W. Beck, former Cleveland securities promoter, today awaited sentencing on charges of mail fraud in connection with the sale of Crown Hill cemetery lots near Twinsburg, O.

Already under a five-year sentence for a similar conviction in Chicago, Beck changed his plea in federal court on the Crown Hill indictment from innocent to guilty. He has appealed from his Chicago sentence.

Called in before Ohio securities officials many times, Beck is also under indictment in Miami county on charges of violating securities laws in connection with promoting interests in the Nassau clipper, said to be a high-speed surface oil tanker.

He was indicted at Cleveland with 15 other salesman on charges of an alleged $1,000,000 swindle in connection with the cemetery lot sales.

Over objections of U. S. Attorney Emerich B. Freed, Federal Judge Robert N. Wilkin consented to a motion to defer sentencing of Beck until six other lot salesmen have been tried next week.

Counsel for Beck asked the court to defer the sentence so that Beck could go to Washington on urgent business in connection with national defense.

CALLS FOR MOBILIZATION OF INDUSTRIAL POWER IN U. S.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Leland Olds, chairman of the federal power commission, fears Germany, already ahead of the United States in electric power production, may acquire great additional sources of power if successful in her military campaign against Russia.

Urging construction of the St. Lawrence navigation and power project, Olds told the house rivers and harbors committee yesterday that a major task confronting this country in its defense program was "outmatching Hitler in terms of complete industrial mobilization." Electric power, he added, was "an essential element" of such mobilization.

"Few people realize," he said, "the additional power facilities German has gained in taking over some of the small countries of Europe." He estimated the reich had "annexed" about 100 billion kilowatt hours of electric energy by conquest and by 1943 would have an output of 200 billion kilowatt hours compared with an estimated 170 billions in the United States.

Asked by Representative Bender (R., Ohio) what advantages there would be in the adoption of daylight saving throughout the country, Olds replied it would be beneficial in conserving power only if carried out in the winter as well as the summer.

He estimated year around daylight saving might effect a saving of 350,000 kilowatts.

Judge Stuart H. Cramer suspended the first sentence to permit Stake to keep his job and provide for his six children.

He was arrested Saturday after police found Mrs. Stake and the six children sleeping in Central park at 3 a. m. Saturday.

They told officers Stake came home intoxicated and beat Mrs. Stake, forcing them to leave their home and walk to Mansfield. The children range in age from one month to 14 years.

Wyoming Forest Named After a Pioneer Scout

KEMMERER, Wyo.—(INS)—After a lapse of 20 years, Jim Bridger, famous pioneer scout, trapper and trader, is again being honored by having a national forest in Wyoming named for him.

A proclamation by President Roosevelt changed the name of the Wyoming National forest, located in Sublette and Lincoln counties, back to Bridger National forest. The tract was originally called Bridger forest before it was consolidated with the Wyoming forest in 1920.

The new preserve is the scene of the famous old scouts early activities in the west. Bridger came to this part of the country in 1822 as a member of the Henry-Ashley Expedition from St. Louis.

The forest takes in 1,110,000 acres of rugged land lying along the western slope of the Wind River Mountains and the Wyoming and Salt River ranges. It was first created as a national preserve in 1911, when it was carved out of the Bonneville district of the Yellowstone tract.

Mansfield Braves are in the process of adding new power for the second half drive in the Ohio State league, which will be good news to most of the Braves, but for those few who must go to make way for the added strength it will be a sad blow indeed.

Bob TeStruth and Tony Drewek have been placed on the temporary retired list, Business Manager Vern Hoffman announced today. This leaves room for Bob Kuzava, the new left-handed hurler, and also for a new outfielder if one is located.

TeStruth's injured ankle won't permit him to play for another week yet, while Drewek is going home to Detroit where his mother is ill and about to undergo an operation, Hoffman explained.

* * *

Buzz Wetzel, chief of the Cleveland Indian farm system, paid his second visit of a week to the Mansfield ball yard Sunday, and indicated that the hunt is on for ball players to strengthen the Braves.

"We need hard hitting outfielders," Prexy George Satterlee of the Braves told Wetzel. "We've got the pitching and the infield."

This was no reflection, of course, on the hitting of Eddie the Mighty Man Mutryn.

This game of ball would be a cinch
If you always had punch in the punch.

A favorite expression among Mansfield fans who have observed Mutryn at close range is: "Why that guy's arm's as big as my leg!"

They should see him cavorting about in shorts as he was several days ago before he had his Sunday picture taken. He's constructed from toe to top-knot, is the Mutryn.

The thing that puzzles me is why he bothers to swing at that ball. With the power he packs, he could bunt that thing over the wall as easily as the others blast it.

The City News professional football team is getting set for next autumn's campaign, and one of the first steps of preparedness was the recent printing of some classy letterheads.

The stationery lists the following official family for the pros: E McMullen, coach. S Saprano, backer; B. Saprano, treasurer; F. Rizzo, manager, and B. Houston, secretary.

Coach Earl McMullen promises a winning combination from the group of former college and high school stars he's lined up, and the only thing that's worrying the boys right now is a place to play. That they hope to find before the summer heat fades out.

* * *

Let's see. It was just last month, wasn't it, that the football season ended in these parts?

Tennis Stars Move Into Fourth Round

CINCINNATI —(AP)— The tri-state tennis tournament went into its fourth day today with national-ranking stars scheduled to push most of the local net talent from the men's and women's singles events.

* * *

Opening matches in men's doubles are slated for late today. Seedings last night rated Frank Parker of Spring Lake, N. J., and Gene Mako of Hollywood as the top pair with Billy Talbert of Cincinnati and Ed Alloo of Berkeley, Calif., second.

* * *

Parker and Miss Pauline Betz of Winter Park, Fla., who won the men's and women's national clay courts singles championships, respectively, at Chicago Sunday were allowed a rest yesterday and play two matches today to catch up. Each is a top seeded favorite.

Billy Talbert, seeded second in men's singles, lost one game to Dick Booth and two to Ernest Janson of Springfield, O., yesterday in taking straight sets from each.

STAGES RALLY

NEWARK, N. J.—(AP)—Getting up from a second-round knockdown, Buddy Knox, 190-pound Dayton, O., fighter, rallied to take a 10-round decision over Wallace Cross, 202, of East Orange, N. J., here last night. Cross, a former national amateur heavyweight champion, spilled Knox for an eight count with a short right to the jaw, but the Dayton battler came back to outclass his heavier opponent and win by a wide margin.

Mel Given Hill Task For Tribe

Has Two-Week Rest For Start Against Boston.

BOSTON—(AP)—Mel Harder, who has had a rest for more than two weeks, was Cleveland's choice to open today a three-game series against the Boston Red Sox, whose pitching staff is far from being ready.

Manager Joe Cronin called on young Dick Newsome, as he proved to be the only hurler available. The American league was idle yesterday, but in their previous tussle with the St. Louis Browns, the Sox used up eight of their ten pitchers. All were hit hard as St. Louis took two of the three games.

Earle Johnson, a rookie left-hander, was Cronin's only other spare, but he developed a sore shoulder.

Harder was selected for today's assignment because he usually is poison to the boys from the Hub. He beat them five times last year, and took one victory in one attempt this year.

Joe Heving, prime relief pitcher for the Tribe, probably will be unavailable for another week or ten days. He hurt his left knee when he slipped in trying to field a ball at Philadelphia last Tuesday night, and has been ordered to take a rest.

What might prove one of the most significant victories of the National league race was scored by fat Freddie Fitzsimmons of the Dodgers yesterday when he licked Pittsburgh, 9 to 4, in one of the day's two big-league games.

* * *

The win did more than just boost Brooklyn within a half-game of the idle St. Louis Cards. It afforded almost positive proof that Fitzsimmons, the wonder veteran who won 16 and lost only two last year, is at last ready to begin taking a weekly turn for a team that has pennant fever.

This means that the Cardinals from now on have even a more desperate job on their hands trying to fight off the MacPhails.

Fitz, who will turn 40 about a month from now, showed no sign yesterday of the sprained back that kept him from starting a game until May 26. The Pirates nicked him for seven hits in as many innings before he yielded to a pinch-hitter in the eighth, but he was steady as a rock in the right spots.

The score was tied yesterday in the eighth, 4 to 4, when Fitz gave way to a pinch-hitter, Herman Franks, the young catcher who recently joined the Dodgers from Montreal. Two were on base. Franks lofted a homerun into the upper right-field stand, and that was that.

Meanwhile, at Chicago, Claude Passeau of the Cubs and Hal Schumacher of the Giants hooked up in one of the season's most brilliant duels, with Passeau the eventual victor, 1 to 0. Schumacher allowed only four hits as Passeau held the Giants to three blows.

* * *

The American league, after a day's rest, swung back into action today with opportunity staring a hole in the second-place Yankees. In the midst of a tremendous hitting streak, Joe DiMaggio and company opened a series against the wobbly Browns at Yankee stadium, while the league-leading Cleveland Indians faced the thunder clubs of the third-place Boston Red Sox.

Star Signs With Tigers For $45,000

DICK WAKEFIELD, MRS. WAKEFIELD AND WALTER O. BRIGGS

Highest bonus ever paid to a college baseball player to sign a contract with a professional team, a reported $45,000, goes to Dick Wakefield, soph outfielder with the University of Michigan this past spring, who has signed with the Detroit Tigers. Wakefield, 20 years old, is a left-handed batter who hit .382 for Michigan in 12 Big Ten games. He is the son of Howard Wakefield, one-time big league baseball player. Mrs. Wakefield signed the contract for Dick because he is under age. Owner Walter O. Briggs of the Detroit Tigers is at right.

Kissell Plans No Changes

Retains Holcomb Aids, Moore and Mariner.

FINDLAY —(AP)— Howard Kissell, newly-appointed director of athletics and football coach at Muskingum college, said today he planned no changes in the coaching staff at the New Concord institution when he takes over this fall.

* * *

Kissell, coach of Findlay college's football and baseball teams the past five years, was named to the Muskingum job yesterday by President Robert N. Montgomery. He succeeds Stu Holcomb, who resigned last spring to become football coach at Washington and Jefferson at Washington, Pa.

Kissell, whose Findlay baseball team laid claim to the Ohio conference championship this spring on a record of eight victories and two defeats, said he would coach football and baseball at Muskingum.

Bill Moore will be retained as line coach, and Mac Mariner will remain as head basketball and track coach, Kissell said.

President Homer R. Dunathan of Findlay said no successor for Kissell had been chosen.

A 1931 graduate of Purdue university where he played end on a Big Ten championship eleven, Kissell will not be stepping into "strange shoes" when he follows Holcomb to Muskingum. He succeeded Stu as coach at Findlay five years ago.

St. Luke's scored 11 runs in the seventh inning, one a homer by Rex with bases loaded. Burton, of the Baptists, also hit a homer in the last half of the seventh with bases loaded.

JOE HAS SORE HANDS FROM SLUGGING "BUMS"

CHICAGO — (INS) — Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis's hands are "sore" from all the use they've had in the Brown Bomber's "bum of the month" title defenses, but they are neither broken nor brittle.

This was the disclosure today by Dr. Homer Cooper after he had studied X-rays made of the Louis fists last Saturday. Louis, who is in Detroit, is to have his hands examined again this week, Dr. Cooper said.

BOB FELLER AWARDED BASEBALL PLAQUE

CLEVELAND — (INS) — Bob Feller, outstanding Cleveland pitcher, will be presented with a trophy and a plaque, both designating him as the "player of 1940" in Municipal stadium before the night game against Philadelphia on July 10, it was announced today.

The trophy will be given by Sporting News, National Baseball Weekly, while the plaque is the award of the Cleveland Baseball federation, governing body of the city's sandlots, the Cleveland Baseball club and Sporting News.

Babe Set To Battle Cobb

Says Ty Ran Out on First Golfing Date.

By BILL KING

NEWTON, Mass. — (AP) — He's older, he's grayer and a good 30 pounds fatter than in 1927, the year he highlighted one of the greatest careers in baseball by hitting an all-time high of 60 homers, but he's the same George Herman (Babe) Ruth with a new competitive zest.

* * *

And that is to take Tyrus Raymond (The Peach) Cobb, one of the few other baseball immortals who can be mentioned in the same breath, over the hurdles tomorrow in their 18-hole charity southpaw golf exhibition here on the revamped and greatly stiffened Commonwealth course.

"I always have wanted to be numbered among the very select few able to give Ty a drubbing at anything," the Babe said yesterday after he put together a seven-over 79 for his first trip over the scene of their pending duel.

"I never have seen him play and I'm not going to do any boasting about the outcome. But I have enough faith in my own golfing ability to suggest that we make a friendly wager before we tee off.

"For years Ty has been broadcasting that he can beat me at any game, anywhere. All I know about that is that he had a chance to prove that on a golf course last year but passed it up. We had him up to dinner one night and I suggested that we play a round the next morning.

He agreed and then called it off by remembering an important business engagement. I learned later he spent the day at the World's fair."

* * *

The Babe beat Ty to the scene of their novel struggle, to raise funds for the Golden Rule farm, the New England version of Boystown, at Franklin, N. H., by 24 hours. The latter is not due here until today.

Bud Baer Booked To Battle Simon

NEW YORK—(INS)—Buddy Baer and Abe Simon today mapped their plans for boxing's battle of the Gargantuas, the same being themselves in a return match Aug. 15 at the Polo grounds.

James J. Johnston, manager of the 254-pound Simon, said Abe will engage in two tune-up bouts before tackling Baer. Simon is billed to fight LeRoy Haines of Philadelphia next week, and Johnston said he hopes to arrange another match sometime in July.

Baer is scheduled to meet Turkey Thompson at Los Angeles July 14.

Last time Simon faced the 240-pound Baer was in a preliminary bout before the heavyweight championship encounter between Titilist Joe Louis and Challenger Tommy Farr Aug. 29, 1937. After taking a sound thrashing during the first two rounds, Baer emerged victorious when he opened a gash on Simon's mouth and the referee stopped the proceedings.

PUBLIC LINKS TOURNEY DRAWS RECORD ENTRY

NEW YORK —(UP)— There's no lack of interest in golf among the fellows who play it on a pay-as-you-go basis.

The entry list for the national public links championship, once the neglected step-child among United States Gold association championships, has reached a total of 2,824 players this year. That figure surpasses any other major golf event in the world and is well above last year's 2,601.

This huge entry list will be whetted down to 192 starters in the 20th public links tournament, which will be played July 14-19 at the Indian Canyon course, Spokane, Wash.

Braves Connect for 13 to 0 Loop Win

Crippled Tribe Plays Twin Bills Tonight and Tomorrow; Salem Out

MANSFIELD'S crippled Braves flailed away mightily with their crutches and canes last night to swamp what has been called Lima's rejuvenated Pandas 13 to 0 at the Fairground.

Schuyler "Pat" Patterson hung the Indian sign on the Pandas for the shutout victory, allowing only five hits and fanning 11.

Blanks Pandas

PAT PATTERSON

Pat had to pitch himself out of three holes. In the fourth he walked three men with only one out, but he got Carlson by the whiff formula, and Tim grabbed a high foul from Mulcahy's bat to end the threat.

* * *

Lima got two of its hits in the sixth frame and two more in the ninth, but Pat ended the first rally with a strikeout, and the second by forcing his mound opponent, Griffis, to pop to Graf Moore.

In the meantime Bobby Ankrum was having a field day with the stick and Lady Luck to pace the Braves' 16-hit attack on Lefty Griffis.

After popping to third on his first trip, Ankrum came through with three straight doubles, a single, and another double. Two of the doubles were of the lucky variety, but they counted just as much as his more emphatic blows.

Rapid Robert legged it all the way to second while a high fly back of the infield was falling between a conference of the second baseman, shortstop and centerfielder, and in the eighth a high infield fly was lost in the lights by Second Sacker Mulcahy, and went for a double.

With Bill Salem added to the hospital list with a twisted ankle, Boss Alex Clowson moved over to centerfield with Freddy Wolpert returning to the left garden.

For the second straight game Clowson gave the fans a top-notch exhibition of fly snatching, and came through at the plate with three hits in four times up, and four runs. Ankrum drove in six runs in his hit parade.

* * *

The Braves climbed on Griffis for two runs in the third inning on Ankrum's first double, Mangan's triple and Moore's double, and came back with another marker in the fourth on doubles by Clowson and Ankrum.

In the sixth a walk, an error, a single by Patterson and a double by Ankrum plated two more runs, and another deuce was chalked up in the seventh on a walk, two errors and Ankrum's single.

The Braves batted around in the eighth for a six-run rally which included doubles by Harry Siegbert and Ankrum, and singles by Mutryn, Moore, Clowson, and Morse.

* * *

Tonight the Braves play a doubleheader at Lima, and they return to the home lot tomorrow night for a twin bill with the league leading Fremont Green Sox.

Southern Star Leads Pack

In Front of Collegians With Four Under Par.

By FRITZ HOWELL

COLUMBUS, O. — (AP) — Stanford's team, and 19-year-old Earl Stewart of Louisiana State, had to look back over their shoulders today to see the rest of the field as they entered the final 18-hole round of the 44th national intercollegiate golf qualifier and team championship race.

* * *

Stewart chopped four strokes off par with a brilliant 68 yesterday over Ohio State's fine layout to snatch a two-stroke lead in the race for the medal.

* * *

Stanford, seeking to erase the record of 601 it set in 1938, used only 285 strokes in getting its four-man team around the course in the squad event, building up a nine-stroke lead over Louisiana State.

* * *

Two of Stanford's stars, Charles Finger and Dee Replogle, were in a tie for second with two-under par 70's, but the 150-pound Stewart, who lives in Dallas, Tex., played yesterday as if he would be hard to catch.

Just a week ago Stewart removed a cast from a broken collar bone which had kept him off the links for seven weeks.

Gene Sarazen, top-notch professional, watched Stewart skim around the course with five birdies and a single bogey, and wondered:

"My, what would that boy do if he broke both collar bones?"

Back of Stanford and L.S.U. in the team fight were Ohio State with 297, Illinois 298, Texas 304, Duke 305, Notre Dame 306, Georgetown 307, Wisconsin 308, Virginia 309, and Northwestern 310.

Match play starts Wednesday and continues through Saturday.

Louisville Spurt Has Fans Talking

(By Associated Press)

The brilliant spurt which has projected those scrappy Louisville Colonels into the thick of the American Association pennant battle has the fans talking—so here's a little statistical ammunition for their arguments as to the reasons for the Colonels' fine showing in recent weeks.

The Colonels, taking a doubleheader Sunday from Indianapolis, (yesterday was an open date) made it seven straight wins on their home field and 12 triumphs in their last 14 games.

* * *

The team, which has won 39 games and lost only 26 for a .600 standing, only three points back of the league leading Minneapolis Millers, has a collective batting average of .275 and is field .973. The club, while having few outstanding power hitters, nevertheless has hit for 807 total bases and has made 85 doubles, 30 triples and 28 homers.

Fans Pick All Star O.S. Team

Balloting Opens For Club To Meet Champs.

THROUGH the newspapers in the various league cities, Ohio State loop fans today began balloting for the all-star team that will meet the first-half champions July 7 in the home park of the champs.

Although Fremont appears a cinch to cop the bunting for the first-half season, which ends July 2, that does not bar Fremont players from participation in the all-star voting. They would play with Fremont, of course, and the players next in line would be moved up to the star squad.

Ballots will appear in league city papers through June 30, and must be turned in to the papers by midnight, July 1. Sports editors in the circuit are to meet at Tiffin July 3 to select the all-star team.

* * *

Players named to the all-star team will receive medals, and players on the championship team also are to receive suitable gifts.

All six umpires in the league will work during the course of the game, with a man at each base and alternating positions.

Fans may ballot as often as they wish, since they may change their minds on their original choices after seeing other players in action.

HORSE LEAVES

RANDWICK, Australia—(U.P.)—Some hearts were saddened and some were gladdened—according to how bets were laid—when, during the running of the Farm Novice Handicap, Reston, a favorite, suddenly left the course, jumped the fence and went home.

Jockey Thompson had been obliged to give it that alternative to a head-on fence crash and the horse rose magnificently to both the occasion and the fence.

SWEDEN FEELS GROWING PINCH OF LIVING COST

Stockholm Ranked as Most Expensive Capital In Europe.

STOCKHOLM — (U.P.) — In the opinion of newspapermen, diplomats and traveled Swedes, Stockholm today is the most expensive capital in Europe.

Money buys less in Stockholm than in Berlin, Paris or even Zurich. Occasional travelers returning from England also claim that living in Stockholm is more expensive than in London.

The rock bottom necessities of daily life are what cost so much here. Rent, food, cigarettes, drink, taxis, shoes, clothes—everything required to live, make heavy inroads in the wallet.

Sweden's staggering prices must be blamed on the war. Sea trade to the west is nil because of the blockade. Recent trade agreements with Germany, Russia and Italy, stress the totalitarian economic principle of barter which means that no real money comes into the Swedish treasury.

Fuel shortage is so acute that recently it was necessary to abolish hot water in private homes altogether. Only a few of the more fashionable tailor shops still can boast of possessing some British textiles. It is believed that textiles and leather goods, including shoes, soon will be rationed.

In restaurants, it is possible to eat without ration tickets, excepting for bread. Officials, however, are examining the advisibility of introducing the one-standard meal system in public places.

Since September, 1939, prices of foodstuffs in Stockholm have risen by more than 32 per cent. During the latter part of 1939 the higher prices of imported food largely were responsible for the general increase, while last year the continued increase was due to higher prices of agricultural products.

Best informed opinion is that if the war still prevents Sweden from resuming normal sea trade with England and both America's, a real pinch will be felt in the late spring.

Withal, Sweden remains a haven of rest in a war-torn Europe. There is no blackout and Stockholm at night, with its electric signs, display windows and streetlights, is an unforgettable picture of clean, modern and expensive living.

HITS PROPOSAL

NEW -BRITAIN, -Conn.—(U.P.)—Although 90 years old and blind, Mrs. Frank Alford couldn't bear the thought of the city destroying the trees in Central park where she romped with her dog in her child hood.

When the proposal was made to cut down the trees, Mrs. Alford, with others, signed a protesting petition. She said the razing would destroy the mental picture of the park she has preserved since she was stricken blind.

TRADERS FALL BACK TO SLOW MARKET PACE

Russo-Nazi War News Fails To Stir Mart Activity After First Rush.

NEW YORK—The stock market reverted to a narrowly uneven course today as the war news seemed to fade as a strong speculative force. A few rails and coppers did fairly well but Steels, Motors, Aircraft, Oils and Utilities faltered.

Wall Street still was hopeful that the Russo-German conflict was a break for the democracies, brokers said, but bullishness marketwise was tempered to some extent by fears the Soviets would be unable to hold out long against the advancing Nazis.

Market optimists found encouragement in the statement of federal reserve member banks in 101 cities for the week ended last Wednesday disclosing an upturn of $28,000,000 in commercial, industrial and agricultural loans. The latest increase put the total at $5,792,000,000, a peak for the past ten years or so.

1 DEAD, 14 HURT IN 5 MISHAPS

Galion Man Killed; Mansfield Residents Injured In Other Traffic Accidents.

auto stalled on the Pennsylvania railroad tracks near "Deadman's Crossing" on Trimble road. Reatha Booker, 27, of 113 Louis street, driver, and six other occupants were able to get out of the car before it was hit by a train.

Riding with Miss Booker were Ben Booker, also of Louis street; Mrs. John Salyers of Henry street, and four children. The car was practically demolished. Sheriff Frank Robinson investigated the accident.

Three other Mansfield residents and a Norwalk man were injured when the latter's car crashed into their auto on Bowman street road a half mile beyond the city limits.

Mansfield police placed a charge of driving while under the influence of alcohol against Loraine Stanley Gorsuch, 27, Norwalk, after pursuing him through city streets out to the place where the accident occurred. Police said they noticed the man's car weaving from one side of the street to the other.

Before they could arrest him, they said he had crashed into another car driven by Frank Wheeler, 45, Mansfield R. D. 1. Wheeler and his wife and daughter, Winifred, 18, who were riding with him, suffered cuts and bruises about the face and head. Gorsuch also suffered cuts and bruises about the chin and head All were treated at General hospital.

In a collision five miles east of Bucyrus on Route 30-N, a woman identified only as Mrs Talbot, was seriously injured when a car operated by R B. Maxwell, 45 of 506 Sloane avenue, collided with another driven by Mrs. Orpha DeWiel, Greenwich.

Bucyrus City hospital attendants said that "Mrs. Talbot" was unconscious and that the extent of her injuries had not yet been fully determined.

Maxwell suffered a fractured left hip and cuts and bruises while Mrs. Dewiel and her daughter, Virginia, both received cuts and bruises about the face and heads

Dwight Roop, Galion, was treated yesterday at Galion City hospital for scalp lacerations and bruises after his motorcycle collided with a truck operated by Robert Balliett, also of Galion, at Union and Summit streets in that city.

Varnes, who died in the crash near Caledonia, was born June 12, 1865, north of Galion. He is survived by three brothers, Edward, Robert and Jess Varnes of Galion; three sons, Lester and Clyde Varnes of Toledo and Leonard of Crestline; a daughter, Mrs. Ruth Rockie of Toledo, and 19 grandchildren. The body was removed to the Volk funeral home in Galion. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

NEW FHA PLAN TO AID CITY

Mansfielders To Be Allowed Loans Up To 90 Per Cent on Building Work.

without a down payment. When the worker had paid ten per cent of the cost, the contractor can turn the loan over to him to pay to the FHA This would eliminate the necessity of a down payment by persons wishing homes.

Limits on the loans include $4,000 for a single home, which would mean about a $4,500 dwelling; $6,500 for a double house, and $10,500 for an apartment house.

W. Barney Ford of the Continental Mortgage company, said that his company was ready to back any loans asked by local contractors on Title Six projects.

He stated however, that it would be up to contractors to decide if they would take advantage of the higher loans. Ford pointed out that the government was not making its offer to have single houses built but several at a time.

Because of the rising cost of labor and materials it was believed that many contractors would use the new loan plan to spread their investment without tying it up in expenses.

AKRON—(U.P.)—Boyd T. Barnard of Philadelphia, nationally-known authority on real estate told the 32nd annual convention of the Ohio Real Estate association last night that a "serious amount of inflation" is due "sooner or later" in this country.

"Economists who held that prices can be controlled, regardless of the national debt, many times are merely justifying present policies," Barnard said.

Others who agree with the inflation theory are those who have "no axes to grind and are not directly or indirectly connected with the government, he added.

ASK TO RETAIN SELECTEES FOR MORE TRAINING

War Department Expected To Urge Congress To Extend One-Year Period.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—The war department expected today to ask congress shortly for legislation authorizing retention of some selectees beyond their one-year training period and expansion of the army by another 100,000 to a total of nearly 1,800,000 men.

The proposals were revealed by Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, in a press conference. Previously, the war department had recommended to President Roosevelt that the national guard units under mobilization be retained in federal service.

Congress would have to authorize by law any extension of service by either the selectees or national guard beyond the year previously approved.

Marshall said that it would be necessary to hold some selectees, probably a limited number, on duty because some of them might be stationed in Alaska or other remote places, or might be needed in special key units.

"We want the selectees to keep coming in but it will depend upon the actual situation at the time," Marshall explained "If we don't need them, we will send them home, but, in all events, we will need legislation."

Marshall said that the army increase would run "slightly" more than 100,000 men, who are needed to fill gaps created by assignment of men to the Atlantic bases leased from Great Britain and by projected formation of more anti-tank units.

The army's goal previously had been 1,418,000 enlisted men by July 1. This with 132,000 officers, the recently authorized 150,000 man expansion for the air corps, and the projected 100,000-man increase would bring the total near 1,800,000.
